Juvenile Jailings In Limbo

The provincial government's multi-million dollar jails-for-juveniles program is in limbo because of a B.C. Supreme Court ruling.

In a decision last week, Justice D.E. Andrews ruled the government exceeded its jurisdiction in passing legislation that resulted in the establishment of a program to contain hard-core juvenile offenders in a jail-like setting.

Andrews found the legislation invaded the federal government's exclusive right to provide for sentencing of juvenile offenders.

The province has sought to have the ruling overturned in the B.C. Court of Appeals.

In the legislature Tuesday, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said 42 juveniles now being held in custody on the program will be returned to the courts for resentencing.

He said Crown prosecutors have been instructed to ask the judges to return the juveniles to the centres as a condition of probation.

Under the Juvenile Deliquency Act, judges can order juveniles to be kept in custody only in cases of remand, when they are awaiting sentence, or if convicted of a crime, as a condition of probation.

Justice Andrews' ruling has forced corrections officials to search for alternative methods in handling juveniles convicted of serious crimes.

The containment program, passed last year as an amendment to the Corrections Act, calls for five centres around the province, each capable of holding 30 inmate-residents.

Only two have been opened, one at Willingdon in Burnaby, the other at Centre Creek, near Chilliwack.

The Lakeview centre, located north of Campbell River, was to have opened Saturday. Eight juveniles were to have been transferred to it from mainland centres on Monday.

Bill Jack, head of provincial corrections on the Island, said in an interview the camp will not now open as planned — at least not as a containment centre — despite the fact 25 persons have already been hired to run it.

He said he'll meet with his staff Thursday to try to come up with some other use for the facility which has just undergone $400,000 in renovations in preparation for the containment program.

One option is to start an attendance program at Lakeview similar to the one in

Quebec Delays Tax Cut

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's dignity is worth three days of uncertainty in business circles, Premier Rene Levesque said Tuesday, announcing that his government has delayed a decision on possible sales tax cuts until later this week.

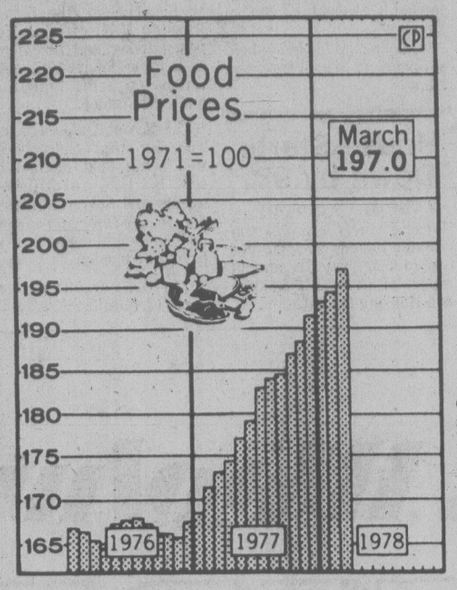

Levesque accused federal Finance Minister Jean Chretien of a "shameless rape" of provincial taxing powers with his announcement in Monday's budget that Ottawa will defray the cost if provinces cut their sales taxes for the next six months.

"If Quebec has to accept this like a sleeping dog, the government would be entering the antechamber of true prostitution," the premier told the national assembly in reply to a question from opposition leader Gerard-D. Levesque.

The opposition leader called on the government to decide immediately whether it will fall into line with the other provinces which have agreed to accept the federal plan and drop their sales taxes up to three percentage points.

Quebec's delay is only creating more uncertainty in commercial circles, the Liberal leader said.

But the premier held fast, saying his government would take until Friday to study the plan before announcing a decision.

HORROR TALE FOR RETIREES

OTTAWA (CP) — A quart of milk for $2.45; rib roast at $4.55 a pound and an average one-bedroom apartment for $815 a month.

Those will be prices in 20 years with seven-per-cent annual inflation, the Ontario royal commission on pensions was told Tuesday. The figures were used by a pensioners' advisory group to demonstrate what it says is the need to increase all pensions to protect purchasing power.

The Council on Aging of Ottawa-Carleton universities was appearing at the first of three days of Ottawa hearings by the commission. The commission is touring the province listening to ideas on how to provide adequate income in retirement.

"We are in favor of full escalation of all pensions to keep them in line with the cost of living," the council said in its brief.

1.1% JUMP IN MARCH

Food, Fuel Push Inflation Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices rose in March by a substantial 1.1 per cent, the largest one-month advance since July, 1975, Statistics Canada reported today.

The 12-month inflation rate was 8.8 per cent, compared with 8.7 per cent in February.

The Consumer Price Index (CPI) last month hit 170.8 compared with 168.9 for February and 157.0 in March last year. The index is based on 1971 prices equalling 100.

Higher food, gasoline and fuel oil prices led the way in the over-all price hike.

The food price index, at 197.0 in March, was nearly double the 1971 base of 100.

The consumer price figures were released two days before the government is to start phasing out wage-and-price controls, imposed Oct. 14, 1975, and a day after release of statistics showing a record 1,045,000 unemployed during March.

Opposition spokesmen denounced the government after release of the figures. They said inflation will hurt low-income persons most.

James McGrath, Conservative social affairs critic, said assistance should be offered to those least able to defend themselves. He called on the government to reinstate a planned elimination of the subsidy on powdered milk, asked that more attention be given pensioners and said workers must not be forced through controls to accept pay raises less than the increase in the cost of living.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, said the current inflation will be devastating for those in the low-income levels. Workers earning $10,000 to $11,000 a year will see their earnings lose about $700 in purchasing power in 1978, he said.

Broadbent said no one can take Finance Minister Jean Chretien seriously any longer. The seven-per-cent rate for 1978 predicted in Monday's budget has already been proven wrong, he said.

Food prices, including higher costs for fresh fruit and vegetables, beef and pork products, were largely responsible for the increase. Food accounted for one-third of the over-all rise.

Higher prices for gasoline and home-heating fuel oil, put into effect by increases in the wellhead price, accounted for another one-quarter of the rise.

Costs of food alone rose by 1.4 per cent, while the rise for all items excluding food was 1.1 per cent.

Prices of food consumed at home, the main engine of inflation in recent months, were 1.6 per cent higher in March than in February and 16.1 per cent above a year ago.

Fresh fruit prices in March were 6.6 per cent higher than a month earlier and 33.6 per cent above levels of March, 1977. Part of the increase is accounted for by devaluation of the dollar, which has made all imported goods more costly.

Beef prices were 1.7 per cent higher in March than in February and up 32.3 per cent from depressed levels of a year ago.

The cost to consumers of fuels and utilities rose by 3.3 per cent in March from February. Over the year, prices in that sector jumped 13.3 per cent.

Dollar Keeps Sliding

The Canadian dollar dropped to a new 45-year-low of 87.2 cents U.S. on New York money markets today as the market continued to show a generally negative reaction to Finance Minister Jean Chretien's budget speech.

The U.S. dollar also dropped slightly on all West European money markets in early trading, reflecting general disappointment over President Carter's speech on the fight against inflation.

One London dealer said it was a "fairly strongly worded speech," but "nothing much has happened; people are pretty disappointed."

Swans Before Humans?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ljuben Jordon Stanenov, 35, of Vancouver, charged with stealing a $300 swan from the city's Stanley Park, said Monday in provincial court that he couldn't understand why birds were treated better than humans.

Stanenov, found guilty by Judge Allen Cliffe of theft over $200 and possession of stolen property, told the court that he killed the European male Mute swan March 16 because his welfare payments did not cover his food costs.

Stanenov said he earned $175 a month on welfare at the time and was paying $120 a month for rent. The money left over was not enough to buy food for a month, he said.

Stanenov was charged after witnesses in the park saw a man grab a swan, slit its throat with a pocket knife and stuff it into a blue plastic bag.

Who Should Play God?

Babies Under Glass

By TED HOWARD and JEREMY RIFKIN

(Fourth of nine parts)

"The womb is a dark and dangerous place, a hazardous environment," says Joseph Fletcher, professor of medical ethics at the University of Virginia School of Medicine. "We should want our potential children to be where they can be watched and protected as much as possible."

Not so very long ago, the womb was a private space. Now things are different. Today, the developing fetus can be observed by microphone, electromicroscopes, infrared thermography, X-ray, ultrasonics, radio-opaque dyes and even by insertion of a miniature camera that will send out motion pictures of the growing life to an eager public.

The late French Nobel prize-winning biologist, Jean Rostand, has often said that he believed the creation of the artificial womb to be "inevitable." In a grand understatement, he acknowledged that such an advent would result "in a more or less profound modification of the human being in the course of formation." Until that glorious day arrived, Rostand suggested "an intermediary solution of the problem."

"Delivery," he forecast, "could be stimulated artificially and the embryo placed in culture at the age of two or three months; in short, a woman could reproduce like a kangaroo."

Baby-in-a-pouch notwithstanding, most researchers in the test-tube baby field are concentrating their efforts on the development of a complete artificial womb.

Dr. Yu-Chih Hsu of Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health has succeeded in growing a mouse embryo in vitro through approximately half its gestation period. Test-tube experiments have shown the potential for human fetal development in vitro.

Dr. E. S. E. Hafez, the Washington State University biologist who specializes in flushing superembroyos from pregnant sheep and cattle and shipping them half-way around the world, is certain that the day of complete test-tube life is nearer than most of us suspect.

Gov't Started Probe

Associate deputy attorney-general Neil McDiarmid said today that contrary to statements by Premier Bill Bennett and Attorney-General Garde Gardom, the RCMP did not initiate an investigation into the use of airline tickets by a former cabinet minister.

McDiarmid said in an interview it was the attorney-general's ministry which was first informed by an anonymous tipster of possible irregularities in connection with the tickets used by Jack Davis, who resigned from his position as energy, transport and communications minister last week because of the controversy.

The ministry then asked the RCMP to investigate the matter, McDiarmid said.

Bennett and Gardom said last week that the RCMP launched the investigation in mid-January.

Gardom said he first learned of the RCMP investigation in mid-February, and informed the premier of the situation March 31. The premier said he met with Davis the following Monday and asked for and received his resignation.

McDiarmid said the major portion of the RCMP investigation of Davis now is complete, and the findings have been turned over to the Crown counsel's office in Vancouver.

Court Told of Suicide Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court jury was told Tuesday that a suspect in the murders of four teen-agers discussed with a cellmate a number of bizarre ways of killing himself.

Constable Carl Harmes was testifying at the trial of Walter Murray Madsen, 24, charged with first-degree murder in the rifle slayings last July 18 in the Fraser Valley community of Rosedale.

Harmes was placed in the Chilliwack police cells with Madsen Aug. 31. Madsen did not know his cellmate was a police officer.

The constable told the jury that Madsen talked about electrocuting himself, hanging himself or throwing himself head first onto the cell floor.

Harmes said Madsen seemed very depressed and said he would have to kill himself and asked the best way to do it.

The officer said Madsen went into a toilet and asked Harmes to lift him up so he could remove the light bulb and electrocute himself by putting his fingers in the socket.

Harmes said he pointed out to Madsen that he (Harmes) also would receive the electrical charge if he were holding Madsen up to the light socket.

Harmes said Madsen's next idea was to climb about 2½ metres up the bars of his cell, and to ask the officer if he thought he would die if he jumped on his head.

"I said, 'no,' but told him he would get a helluva of a headache," Harmes testified.

The officer said Madsen seemed "almost desperate to kill himself," and next took off his shirt, twisted it, placed it over his neck and tied it to the bars of his cell.

"He asked me to tie his hands so he would not grab the bars at the last moment," Harmes said. "I said 'no' because I didn't think he was serious about killing himself."

"He looked very pathetic at the time. I told him to tell someone what he had done and he would feel a lot better.

"He said he did not think he could ever tell anyone else what he had done."

The officer said Madsen was taken out of the cells and on his return said he had confessed to the shootings.

In a later conversation, Harmes continued, Madsen told him he had planned to kidnap the teen-agers, but decided to kill them when he realized there were four present, not two.

Harmes said he asked Madsen how he felt during the shooting and the suspect said he felt awful.

He said he asked Madsen about Leola Guliker, 16, whose body has not been

DYED-IN-WOOL BANK ROBBER

MONTREAL (CP) — A young bank robber turned bright red Tuesday but it wasn't from embarrassment.

The man had carried off a robbery at a downtown bank and was entering a nearby subway station to make his getaway.

Just then, part of his loot exploded in a cloud of crimson smoke. The bandit, looking down and seeing that his hands and clothing had turned bright red, dropped the money and ran into the subway.

In his moment of shock, he may have thought the red coloring was blood. Police say several passers-by did.

But the man had fallen victim to the bandit pack, a small anti-robbery device being tested in about 25 Montreal-area bank branches rated as high hold-up risks.

The $200 pack is set to detonate from 25 seconds to four minutes after it leaves the bank, leaving an unwashable dye on the money and the thief.

Post Office Bill Pushed

OTTAWA (CP) — A special government bill to ban a postal strike during a federal election campaign appeared on its way to becoming law Tuesday after the Commons gave it approval in principle.

But the New Democratic Party refused a government request to whip the measure through all stages of Commons consideration in one day and predicted the measure will not come up for a final Commons vote until Friday.

"If the government wants the bill, it will have to stay here and do it," said Stanley Knowles, NDP House leader and MP for Winnipeg North Centre.

During the debate, several opposition MPs said they expect an election call "any day now."

Progressive Conservatives supported the bill because they said a postal strike would be disruptive. But they objected to the last-minute move to deal with a problem that should have been dealt with before an election was looming.

GOOD DAY FOR BLOOD

Today's clinic is being held at Spectrum School from 1 to 7 p.m.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Housing starts last year in Greater Vancouver fell 9 per cent to 15,257, says the annual report of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Soviet Diplomat Mystery Deepens

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Arkady N. Shevchenko, the highest Russian U.N. official, deepened today and threatened to hamper Soviet-U.S. negotiations on arms limitations and other issues.

The Soviet Union charged Tuesday that Shevchenko was being held against his will by U.S. intelligence agents and Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin said the incident would cause new superpower tensions.

"In the current delicate state of relations," said Dobrynin, "it will certainly contribute to the tensions."

The arms talks between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko are scheduled for April 20 in Moscow.

Shevchenko, undersecretary-general for political and Security Council affairs, asked for a leave last week, informing the United Nations he had had "differences with his government" and vanished after locking and sealing his office.

The reason for Shevchenko's departure was not known.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim said in Dublin that he did not know Shevchenko's intentions other than that "he does not want to return to the Soviet Union."

Shevchenko's New York lawyer, Ernest A. Gross, denied reports that Shevchenko had defected. State Department officials said he has not asked for political asylum.

MLA Attacks Mill Plan

The proposal by Doman Industries to build a pulp mill on the Cowichan River estuary was attacked in the legislature Tuesday by Barbara Wallace (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat).

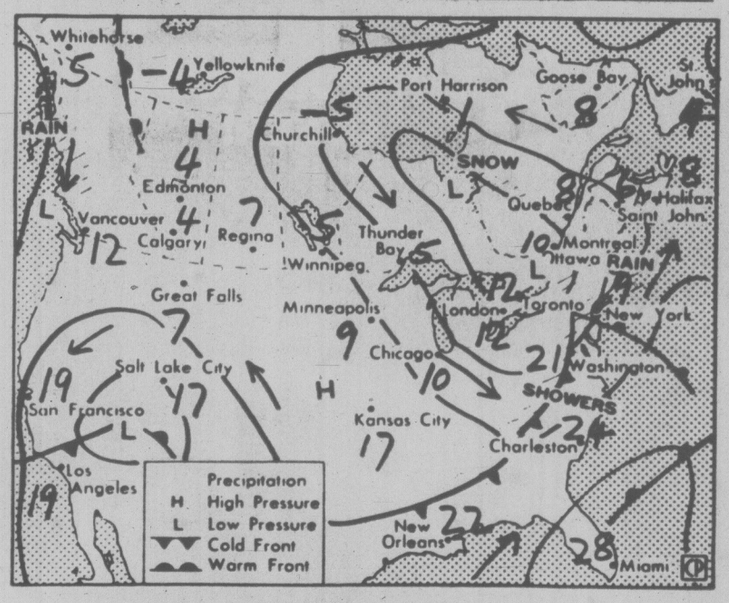

"It's a pulp mill we don't need," she said. "We don't have the resources on the island to provide wood for that pulp mill."

She said it is a case of a friend of the government getting the "last remaining stand of timber in exchange for some kind of a scheme to provide jobs."

Nuclear Test Underground

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States and Britain jointly conducted an underground nuclear test in the Nevada desert Tuesday, the U.S. energy department announced.

the weather

Map valid until noon Thursday

A strong northwesterly flow continues to replenish the supply of unseasonably cool air which swept across the province Monday and which produced the unsettled weather yesterday. Showers subsided slowly in the Interior overnight and along the south coast skies cleared and the wind eased from gale force to barely brisk. On the north coast however the shower activity had not yet ended when another disturbance arrived with overcast skies and a few more showers. With somewhat lighter winds on Thursday temperatures will climb towards normal but the heating will result in a recurrence of afternoon clouds and showers.

'Way To Win' Tory Style

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative image-makers are instructing candidates for the next general election to avoid being "apologetic or negative about anything" and to remember that personalities are more important than issues to many voters.

The instructions are outlined in a detailed communications manual sent to campaign managers by the party's election advertising firm, Media Buying Services of Toronto.

The manual, entitled The Way to Win, comes complete with order forms for party stickers, posters, pens, lighters and door hangers, the party's campaign slogan "let's get Canada working again" and a step-by-step guide to running a campaign.

It provides advice on everything from recycling campaign materials used during the last election in 1974 to writing so-called "modular speeches"—five minute statements on various subjects that can be mixed in different combinations, supplemented by new introductions and conclusions and delivered as "an instant speech."

The manual reminds campaign managers that emotion plays an important part "in the thought processes" leading to decisions by voters.

"Many voters have neither the time nor interest to read or understand actual issues," it says.

"The very fact that your candidate is on TV can give the impression that you are more organized than you are, or have more support, backing, etc."

Before the campaign begins, organizers are told to sift all information about candidates into "positive and negative factors." The negative qualities are important "and must not be glossed over at this point."

SATELLITES DETECT SOLAR FLARE

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The most violent solar flare in almost four years might cause radio signal blackouts, telephone circuit failures and displays of the northern lights in the world's northern latitudes later this week, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) said.

A spokesman for American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (AT and T) said U.S. customers probably will not notice any lapse in telephone circuits.

The flare was detected Tuesday by NOAA satellites orbiting 22,300 miles above the earth, the agency said.

Carl Posey, a spokesman for NOAA's Environmental Research Laboratory here, said the flare will produce a storm in the earth's magnetic field, resulting in radio signals being absorbed rather than reflected, beginning Thursday.

He predicted widespread telephone circuit failures and said aurora borealis displays — the northern lights — would be visible south of an east-west line that would pass through Chicago.

Pic Wagner, a spokesman for AT and T's Long Lines Division, said: "We do not expected the predicted solar flare activity to affect telephone customer communications. The nationwide telephone network is designed to handle customer communications under all kinds of conditions. If any portion of the network were to be affected by solar flare activity, telephone communications would immediately be rerouted and customers should not even be aware of the different circuits being used."

Sun spot and solar flare activity generally follows an 11-year cycle. The last cycle ended in 1976, preceded by a gradual decline of activity. That activity is increasing again, but NOAA researchers said there is no way of determining how active the surface of the sun may be over the next few years.

Canadian Banks Made Loans to Chile - Report

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian and U.S. banks have lent millions of dollars to Chile at a time when the two countries have condemned the South American regime as repressive, says a study released Tuesday.

The study, to be submitted to the UN Human Rights Commission, says private loans now far surpass assistance from public international monetary groups as Chile's chief source of external financing.

It says that since 1973, when the present military government took power in a coup, U.S. banks have lent Chile about $900 million. Since 1976, Canadian banks have made loans of more than $35 million and in addition, have been involved in international consortia which lent an additional $180 million it says.

The study was prepared by Michael Moffitt and Isabel Letelier of the Washington-based Institute for Policy Studies, a private political research group.

The study says that after reports of widespread arrests, murders and torture of opponents of Pinochet's regime became known, many western countries, including Canada and the United States, stopped or reduced their aid programs to Chile.

A spokesman for the external affairs department in Ottawa said Tuesday that Canada has no aid program going on in Chile now. The U.S. Congress, in 1976, put a $27.5-million ceiling on aid to Chile.

The Inter-American Development Bank also has drastically reduced loans to Chile, it says, and the World Bank has made no new loans since December, 1976.

The study says that while these funds were drying up, loans from private multinational financial institutions increased to 500 per cent between 1975 and 1976 alone.

Moffitt said in an interview that loans from U.S. institutions account for more than two-thirds of the loans to the Pinochet regime while banks in Canada, Britain, France and West Germany account for the rest.

He said that while the Canadian banks "have not been nearly as bad as the U.S. ones," their dealings with Chile included:

—$10 million to CORFO, the Chilean national development agency, by a group headed by the Bank of Nova Scotia in March, 1977;

—A further $10 million loan to CORFO by a Bank of Nova Scotia-led group in May, 1977;

—$3 million from a group headed by the Royal Bank of Canada in April, 1977;

—$400,000 to the Chilean foreign relations ministry from a group led by the Bank of Nova Scotia in August, 1977;

—$125 million to the Chilean Central Bank in April, 1976, from a group led by Bankers Trust Co. of New York, which included the Bank of Nova Scotia, the Royal Bank and seven U.S. banks;

—$55 million to Cap, the state-owned steel company, from another Bankers Trust-led group, in which the Royal Bank was involved, in April, 1977.

Moffitt said a further $14.7 million either had been lent or was being considered by the Bank of Montreal, which would involve assistance from Canada's Export Development Corp., to improve the Papeless y Cartones paper company.

Canada Limits Troops For UN

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson said today Canada will contribute more troops to the United Nations peacekeeping force in Southern Lebanon if certain conditions are met.

Danson said Canada will agree to supply up to 80 troops to serve until Oct. 1. The United Nations has asked for 140 to 150 servicemen for the interim peacekeeping force.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson is discussing the matter with UN officials in New York today.

The government said in March that Canadian servicemen would be sent into southern Lebanon for only two to four weeks, time enough for the UN to find replacements from other countries.

Canada now has 35 logistics troops in the area, mainly signallers.

The United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) was set up after Israel invaded Lebanon in mid-March to destroy Palestinian guerrilla bases. The U.N. force is to stay in the region until Israeli troops are withdrawn and peace is restored.

Danson and Jamieson have said they are not anxious to agree to further peacekeeping roles for Canada because the armed forces are already stretched to the limit in supplying troops to UN groups in Cyprus and the Middle East.

About 1,100 servicemen are involved in peacekeeping duties.

Caucus Expells MP In Socred Party Feud

OTTAWA (CP) — A feud within the Social Credit party over the timing and location of a leadership convention exploded Tuesday with the expulsion of an MP and the resignation of the interim leader.

Rene Matte (Champlain) was expelled by his fellow MPs and Gilles Caouette (Temiscamingue) was asked to resign as interim leader because they refused to accept a national council decision to hold a leadership convention May 6 and 7 in Winnipeg.

Caouette, son of the late leader Real, will remain within the party and will be replaced as interim leader by Charles-Arthur Gauthier, a 64-year-old undertaker who has represented the Quebec riding of Roberval since 1962.

Matte and Caouette say the convention should be held in Ottawa or Quebec in June because most of the membership is in Quebec and no MPs have been elected from outside that province since 1965.

The 38-year-old Caouette also said in an interview that the timing of the convention breached the party's constitution because it was not called at least four months in advance.

The party's national council set the date last month at a Winnipeg meeting, leading to intense bickering among the party's nine MPs.

Party officials said they expect Matte will sit in the Commons as an independent MP, although he earlier threatened to join the Progressive Conservatives.

A Conservative party spokesman said there have been no discussions between Conservative Leader Joe Clark and Matte and none were expected.

Matte, a 43-year-old school teacher from St. Marc-des-Carrieres, Que., was first elected to the Commons in 1968.

Both the Conservatives and Liberals are predicting they will take some Social Credit seats in a federal election many expect will be called for June.

Now Is the Time

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party. And spend, spend, spend. That was Finance Minister Jean Chretien's message to Canadians in his budget speech this week. The party, of course, is the Liberal party, heading into an election this year and in need of all the help it can get.

The fact that Chretien managed to talk the provinces into cutting sales taxes in unison — the only major boost for the economy in Chretien's short and not-so-sweet budget speech — demonstrates at least that the Grits have lost none of their political wiles.

Its political beauty is stunning: Ottawa gets most of the glory for masterminding a sales tax reduction across the board, will pay for two-thirds of it out of borrowings and reduced spending elsewhere and the provinces (the richer ones will pay one-third of the cost; B.C. has raised some of its taxes — tobacco, alcohol — already to pay for its share) reap most of the disapproval when, inevitably, the sales tax goes back up.

The length of time it will be effective is significant — six to nine months, which will nicely cover either a spring or fall election.

Economically, however, it is not quite a perfect creation. That is not to say the sales tax cut will not help the Canadian economy; it will. But the economy's central problem does not appear to be a shortage of ready cash in the hands of average Canadian consumers. Just the opposite; savings deposits in the chartered banks and credit unions are at a high level. The problem to be overcome is a reluctance to spend what has been put aside for a rainy day, to be used in bad times.

And we doubt Canadians are convinced that the storm is past. With a million unemployed and inflation continuing its merry chase — both of which will only be marginally affected by the new budget; the lifting of controls in fact may make the latter even worse — there is still a lot to be afraid of. The times encourage people to save their money, be satisfied with what they have and do without the things they'd like.

Another drawback to the temporary nature of the cut is that, because Canadian manufacturing is operating at only 80-85 per cent of its capacity, just by the time the demand created by the sales tax cut should reach back to encourage companies to expand output, the tax will jump back to its former high level.

Chretien and the Liberal government hope when that happens, other factors will have combined to take up the slack. And they will be re-elected. Perhaps both will occur; miracles do happen sometimes.

The finance minister is somewhat more realistic on the topic of inflation. "We can turn the tide against inflation," he said. Not "we have turned" or "we will turn." A very conditional metaphor. Chretien has learned from the excessive optimism of previous ministers of finance and the prime minister.

If he hopes his elegant metaphor will prove to be more accurate than others used to describe the economic phenomenon of our times (remember when it was announced inflation had been "beaten" and "wrestled to the ground"?), then he is certainly placing his hopes beyond his budget. There is not much there that will do the trick.

"... I'm gonna try out a few lures the old man left me ..."

A Little Prayer

"I didn't think we'd reached that sort of impasse so rapidly. Frankly, I'm more than a little disapointed." So said Barry Sharpe, Vancouver Island manager for Genstar Development Co., after Central Saanich's subdivision and zoning committee this week torpedoed the company's plans for a $14 million housing and shopping complex on Tod Inlet.

Nowadays nobody loves a developer but a pitying shake of the head can be spared for Sharpe. He seems to have underestimated the clout packed in Central Saanich by Ian Ross, president of Butchart's Gardens, Greater Victoria's proudest tourist attraction, in whose environs the Genstar project was planned.

"To allow a developer to erect this sort of edifice next to our boundaries is ... horrendous," Ross declared at a recent meeting where it was publicly discussed. Four hundred people were there and most of them applauded him.

Members of the zoning committee got the message. The vote against Genstar's plans was unanimous. The company, which hadn't expected the rebuff, must now decide what to do with its 22-acre site, part of 1,000 acres it owns in the area. Perhaps it can take heart from aldermanic comments that its approach was premature.

Meanwhile tourists continue to stroll in the delightful gardens undisturbed by the sights and sounds of commercial construction. They aren't the ones that the proprietors have in mind when they recite this little prayer:

We thank thee, God, that thy grace
Hast brought us to this lovely place.
And now, Dear Lord, we humbly pray

Tied Up and Swamp-bound

OTTAWA — There wasn't much that street-fighter Jean Chretien could do. The gnomes of Zurich had the finance minister's hands tied behind his back, one of his feet was stuck in the "stagflation" swamp, the other was stuck in the hole left by the government's cash deficit, even before Chretien touched it, of $11 billion.

Thus handicapped, Chretien still managed to win one round in two. Score him a bum on economics, but a champion on politics.

Pound of Flesh

When unemployment is one million and inflation is close to 10 per cent, Chretien $750 million net boost to the economy (a tax cut of $1.1 billion, offset by reduced spending of $350 million) will do no more good than did his $2 billion worth of tax cuts last October, which was precisely nil. Further, consumer spending inspired by Chretien's six months' cut in sales taxes will simply advance sales that would have been made anyway next winter, when unemployment will be on the rise.

The gimmick, mind you, won't actually harm the economy. Indeed, by limiting, even in a pre-election budget, his forecast cash deficit to $11.5 billion, Chretien may convince the gnomes (the ones in Wall Street really matter more than those in Zurich) that they've been paid their pound of flesh. They may even, for a while anyway, cease nibbling at the dollar.

In the only economic fight that really matters, though, Chretien was flattened. About "structural" reforms to make Canadian industry competitive again, he was silent. In place of programs and policies, Chretien could offer only yet more pondering — "studies are proceeding ... in 22 manufacturing sectors. ... Food and agricultural policies are under review. ... The government is proceeding with its (mineral policy) review."

Usually cocky, Chretien's rhetoric this time seemed to reflect his own uncertainty about where he expected the economy to actually go. "We can," he said, "turn the tide against inflation." (Not, note, we already have, or soon will turn the tide). "We are going through a difficult period of adjustment ... Forecasts for 1978, including my own, have been shaded down ... Confidence is improving, although not as quickly as I would like to see."

About his political challenge, Chretien had no doubts. Nor need he have. Chretien's six month cut of three percentage points in provincial sales tax — worth, in Ontario, $180 on a $6,000 car — may or may not ring up extra sales in the long run. In the short run, extra votes for the Liberals are a certainty.

Chretien sweet-talked the provinces with the same calculated ease. Since the provinces pick up one-third of the cost, Chretien, with his two-thirds outlay, has managed both to scoop up all of the immediate political gain and to shrug off all of the political blame which will settle upon the provinces next fall when they ratchet back their sales taxes to their pre-budget levels.

There was more than rhetoric, though, to Chretien's claim that this agreement amounted to "an outstanding example of federal-provincial fiscal co-operation." For the first time, a significant portion of a federal budget was negotiated jointly with the provinces — at the price that this part of the budget was promptly leaked. Each province negotiated its own deal: Alberta, which hardly needs it, agreed to get nothing; Ontario, Manitoba and the Atlantic provinces all will drop their sales taxes by three percentage points for six months; Saskatchewan and B.C., both of which may go to the polls in the fall, stretched their cuts to the year's end by reducing sales taxes by only two percentage points; Quebec, to prove it isn't Ottawa's lackey, postponed its reply.

Fair Performance

Aside from the obeisance to Wall Street, and for some new tax incentives to research and development, the economic consequences of Chretien's budget are small enough that unemployment, inflation, economic growth and the dollar all will curve upwards or downwards exactly as they would have had Chretien remained mute in his seat.

For the Liberals, though, the political consequences of Chretien's budget justified his rhetoric about "positive and responsible action." Chretien no longer can be criticized for trying to slip into an election without a budget. He can claim to have tried to do something. He can expect some gratitude from voters who find that stoves and refrigerators and cars are suddenly, if temporarily, cheaper.

A fair night's performance for a street-fighter, provided you forget that it's economic, not political, bouts that finance ministers are paid to contest.

PAUL WHITELAW

A Push Instead of a Shove

OTTAWA — As a campaign battle plan, Jean Chretien's budget is tight-fisted about tax giveaways for the "average Canadian" so beloved of politicians.

But the finance minister, who alluded in his speech to "the prospect of an early election," set the economic theme of a chastened Liberal party as it prepares to face the voters: realism and responsibility in troubled times.

Those troubles, he pointed out, are worldwide — not merely a Canadian phenomenon. Blame should be attributed not to reckless government policies but shared by all Canadians because "we all came to expect too much of the economy" during the bouyant mid-1960s and mid-1970s. And, in any event, a "gradual recovery ... has been established."

The aim of the government is to give the economy a responsible "push," not a more dramatic shove that would be "popular politically but unwise economically."

Opportunists?

There will be, in that vein, no personal income tax cuts to win friends at the polls, nor will the basic corporate tax rates be changed.

The Conservatives and New Democratic Party have been calling for just such cuts, and the Liberals can be expected to brand their opponents as opportunists who would buy votes at any price.

Prime Minister Trudeau may have told the February Liberal convention that his party is one of the "extreme middle" or "radical centre," but the government has been manoeuvring to undercut the Tories on the political right.

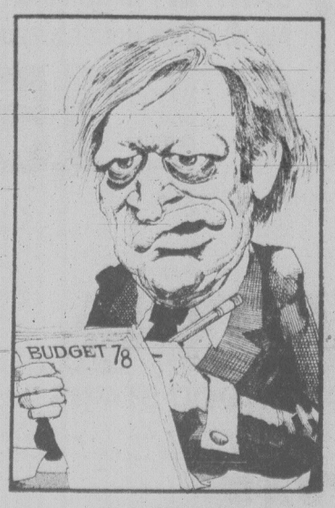

Still, the budget contains some good news for the "average Canadian" — in the form of a temporary three per cent reduction in sales tax in at least eight of the provinces. The exceptions are booming Alberta, which has no sales tax, and Quebec, which isn't sure yet whether it wants to go along with Ottawa's plan. (B.C. cut its sales tax by two per cent, not three, but the reduction will be in force for at least a year.)

The federal government will compensate provinces for the cuts, paying the entire shot in the four Atlantic provinces which are "less able ... to bear this additional cost." In the other participating provinces, Ottawa will compensate for revenue lost through a two per cent reduction on condition that the provinces effect a further cut of one per cent.

Chretien told the Commons that about one-third of the sales tax cuts will be paid for by the stronger provinces, about a third by federal deficit financing, and an equal share by an anticipated $300 million cut in other previously-anticipated federal spending.

If all nine provinces with sales taxes take part in the program, the finance minister estimated, the measures would produce a $1.1 billion tax cut over six months to stimulate consumer spending.

Chretien noted that the decline in the international value of the Canadian dollar is having the immediate effect of increasing prices for imports, while the beneficial impact on exports is farther down the road. Cutting sales taxes is designed to be "fast-acting" and "should offset some of the temporary factors which are pushing up prices."

JEAN CHRETIEN
... champion positive thinker

Other measures aimed at the public include a liberalization of tax rules affecting Registered Retirement Savings Plans, and the transfer of family farms and homes. Low-interest loans backed by companies to help employees buy stock or housing, which were subject to personal income tax under some circumstances, will be tax free; although that latter measure affects relatively few, mostly affluent Canadians.

While business won't get a general tax break, the government wants to allow increased write-offs for research and development. The opposition parties will be hard-pressed to find fault with that measure. There will also be incentives for energy developments, and the railways will benefit from a six per cent increase in the depreciation allowance for capital expenditures, a measure aimed at improving the rail system and increasing investment in new equipment.

While maintaining that Canada's economy is now on a steady, if slow, course of recovery, Chretien has been forced to admit that the inflation rate — specifically, the consumer price index — is likely to be about seven per cent this year. That is one point higher than anticipated in his October "mini-budget," when he announced plans for the phase-out of wage and price controls. However, Chretien stuck to his fall prediction that the real growth of the economy will be five per cent.

Those figures, particularly the inflation rate, are based on some highly optimistic assumptions.

Troubled World

With controls ending at midnight Friday after 2½ years, Chretien's assessment that the "gradual recovery" will continue is based on a gamble that organized labor will be in a docile mood, forgoing any widespread rush for wage catch-ups. "There will be times when we will have to pay more for some things we buy without expecting any offsetting increase in our incomes," he said, acquiring champion status as a positive thinker.

Admonishing business to restrain price increases, Chretien expressed the hope they will "explore markets aggressively" as the means of boosting sales and profits and "demonstrate ... faith in Canada."

The finance minister said he had "refused to make irresponsible promises to the people of Canada" because he respected "the intelligence of those who will be choosing the next government."

"There is only one way to get out of our difficulties ...," Chretien told MPs expecting an imminent election call. "It is through hard work, imagination, determination and discipline that we will succeed ..."

By implication, he was also saying the solution is not to throw out the government, which has done as well even better, than could be expected "in a very troubled world."

Chretien left no doubt Canadians will be hearing those words, again and again, in the coming election campaign.

Do It Yourself

I was so pleased to read in the Times April 4 under Town Talk (Tip from the Top and Off They Go) that Premier Bill Bennett fixed a government car. This know-how has no doubt saved the people of B.C. a sum of money, say $25 or $30 of or a service call from the local service station.

Now that the department of public works is out of the way, other members of our government could follow Bill's good example and roll up their sleeves and save the taxpayers a bundle.

For example, Bill Vander Zalm could come to work one or two days a week in his gardening togs and do a little work around the flower beds. Sam Bawlf with his experience in renovation and restoration could tackle some of the work on the parliament buildings that is costing us so many dollars. And Grace McCarthy could fill in as a parliamentary tour guide, smile and all.

I don't know all the talents of the other members but I am sure they are many, and if harnessed could be a great saving for beautiful B.C.

Maybe even Pierre would get the message. — Bill Bowie, 924 Queens Avenue.

British Affliction

Your page five article by John Rae, Why are the British so Keen on Beating one Another? brought back to memory my early schooling in Manitoba. One teacher for 60 pupils aged six years on up to Grade IX. I do not remember any of us with British accents!

However, we had two male teachers from England. One used a thick book on the side of the head that made our ears ring like the Bow Bell of London and with long hours of headaches. The other did use a cane at times but his favorite weapon was a 2½-inch-wide strap with two slits 12 inches long.

This was used on the back of the hand, in several cases till the blood came, then one was ordered to write perfect copy with a shaking hand which couldn't hold a pen. Every girl in school was crying. Both these teachers were fired.

I learned later that the one who used the strap was studying to become a prosecution lawyer. This was a teaching method? Then we got British lady teachers — one that cried while using the strap on the front of the hand which didn't even hurt. In my own case, I was then sent to sit with the girls as further punishment.

Little did those teachers know that I was having the time of my young life (in a nice way, of course)! — Len Skelton, 4068 Grange Road.

Give Us Break

I want it understood that I am not prejudiced against older, retired people, but I care and do love them. Give us who are working a break. Please take your "Sunday drive," which can be any day of the week, after 9 a.m. in the morning until 4:30 p.m.

It is so frustrating to follow you at 20 kilometres an hour in a 40 kilometres an hour zone as you enjoy lovely Victoria, straddling two lanes! Ultimately in sheer frustration we blare our horns, drive around you, endangering others.

Those of us who ride the buses are too tired to give up seats to an elderly lady who has been shopping for her new hat, a new dress and other packages which would take up two seats anyway!

It is 4:30 p.m. or so and we have had our day since 6 a.m.! Surely, you fortunate ones can avoid us until 9 a.m. and again from 4:30 p.m. until 6 p.m. please?

As you once did, remember how annoyed you used to get for those unnecessary crowds, because they could not sleep, or sleep in, and decided to take a ride downtown, or a drive? Enjoy an extra "cuppa tea" or coffee and enjoy your day — after 9 a.m. 'til 4:30 p.m. — F. Lycan, 246 Simcoe Street.

One Canada

All Canadians should have the opportunity to read a brochure that I received from Canadians For One Canada, 804-213 Notre Dame Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba R3B 1N3. I wish to see Canada stay together and believe that it is a real possibility if the following platform of this new political force is adopted by all political parties:

Canada, is a partnership of all Canadians, Canadians must be united by a common national language, respecting use of all minority languages. All Canadians are equal, no special status for any group.

Bilingual Quebec, common language Canada. Opposition to language and cultural legislation, which only leads to division. No additional language rights in the constitution. Control over amending the constitution must be held by all provinces, and no veto by any one province.

Canadians For One Canada believe that Canada is one country and that Canadians are all one people — not two different races. — L. Mcleod, Prince George.

New Man at the Top of Canada's Labor Unions

By WILFRED LIST
The Globe and Mail

The McDermott era in the Canadian labor movement has begun. Dennis McDermott, the 55-year-old Canadian director of the United Auto Workers, stepped forward this month for his coronation as the new president of Canada's 1.3-million-member national labor congress.

He will have a potential 10-years in office, to the private chagrin of three congress officers who had their eye on Canada's top labor post. They will now have no chance at the job unless McDermott falls flat on his face in the intervening years before he is required to retire at 65.

By giving the nod to McDermott, the executive council blocked the ambitions of executive vice-president Shirley Carr, secretary-treasurer Donald MacDonald and executive vice-president Julien Major, all of whom coveted the presidency. Once the executive council had made its unanimous decision, cabinet solidarity prevailed and the other aspiring candidates threw in their chips.

What Joe Morris, his stolid predecessor lacks, McDermott has in abundance. He has a flair few Canadian labor leaders can match; a quick tongue, sometimes edged with acid, sometimes salty, but never at a loss for a word; a combative nature mixed with warmth and charm; and supreme self-confidence.

Canadian labor policy-makers, business leaders and political figures with a vested interest in labor wait with interest and uncertainty for the change in leaders of the congress.

For all the focus on image and on McDermott's proclivity for jarring statements and for wearing his causes either on his sleeve or as symbolic ornaments around his neck, there are no basic philosophical differences between him and Morris.

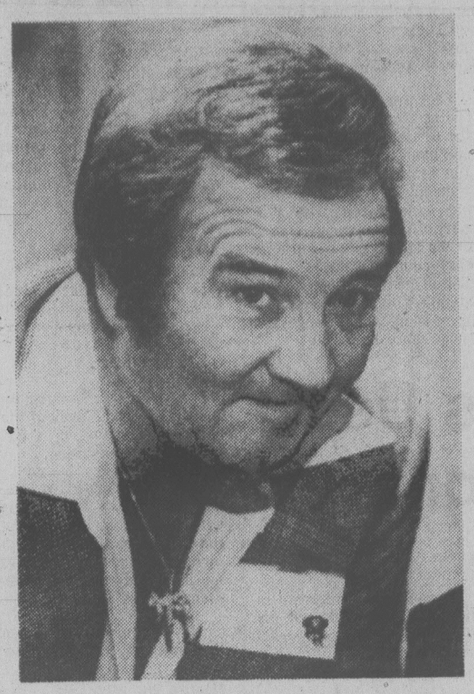

Perhaps because of his role in the world labor movement, as chairman of the governing body of the tripartite International Labor Organization, Morris is more urbane in his relations with the business community; McDermott is still nettled at what he feels is the lack of acceptance of a labor leader by some within the business community.

Despite his militance and the cutting edge to his tongue when excoriating those he regards as recalcitrant employers, McDermott is as favorable to serious discussions with business leaders and government as Morris.

Because he is a strong leader — as he has demonstrated in the UAW — he is as keen as Morris has been to give the CLC more power both within the Canadian economic community and within the labor movement.

The CLC has no trade union functions. McDermott, like Morris before him, will not normally sit at the bargaining table when he becomes president of the congress. And in normal circumstances the CLC cannot call a single worker out on strike. However, history will record that McDermott was the first national union leader to propose a national protest strike against controls. Morris, at first reluctant, then with all the vigor the congress could exert, provided national leadership for the one-day walkout by nearly one million workers on Oct. 14, 1976. It was Canada's first political strike.

Basically, the congress is an umbrella body for its affiliated unions and their legislative voice on national affairs. It is a lobbying organization with more ambitious aspirations to acquire an effective role in government economic policy-making.

MCDERMOTT . . . starts 10-year CLC term

Recently, the president of a firm of consultants to management provided a number of corporate executive officers with an analysis of the change of leadership in the CLC, giving favorable marks to McDermott. The business leaders were told that McDermott "is today Canada's outstanding labor leader." Personal letters also described him as "very able, reasonably well balanced, eloquent and tough."

The analysis added, "He is something of a rough diamond with a good intellect and a tough, but not closed, mind."

That aspect of the evaluation was on the mark. It might also have added that McDermott is a pragmatist with a keenly-honed sense of members' thinking.

Power appeals to him. He is not about to give up his role in the UAW, including his office as international vice-president, to be the head of an organization that would be no more than a national lobbying, legislative and research body. He wants to play a significant part in the world of real power.

He is not likely to lead the congress charging off in new directions, for the first few years at least. Rather, he will build on the new base of the congress what Morris has developed: an opening to the government and business and an effort to develop a more central power structure. He will be able to lead and to prod, but final policy decisions rest with the executive council. McDermott's is a persuasive voice. He is not likely to encounter much dissent.

The problems that lie ahead for him and for the CLC are many and complex. Not only is the unity of the labor movement at stake but also the unity of the country. McDermott is a strong proponent of the right of the people of Quebec to make their own decision about independence.

The congress and Mr. McDermott face equally troubling problems when the phasing out of controls begins Friday. There is the cruelly high level of unemployment, its impact on the country and on the labor movement and the response of labor to economic conditions. They will all test McDermott's leadership.

He has not been enamored in the past of having to concern himself with detail, preferring to delegate that to associates. Sometimes, in the absence of his research staff, he has relied on top-of-the-head responses. At the congress level anything not scrupulously researched can only backfire.

His causes are many and he will undoubtedly carry them into the congress with the vigor with which he has pursued them in the UAW.

He was once a member of an encounter probe that stirred up the black community in Halifax and Dartmouth. He pulled no punches.

"I went out into the black community and talked to some of my soul brothers there and said, 'You are the biggest bunch of Uncle Toms that I have ever seen in my life.'

"That brought the black population out in force at the next meeting, to spit out their long-time grievances."

If blacks are his soul brothers, so are the Quebecers.

The UAW was the first union to endorse the principle of the right of the people in Quebec to determine their province's future status.

"If I were a French-Canadian living in Quebec, I would probably call myself a Quebecer rather than a Canadian," McDermott said. "I most certainly would have voted for the Parti Quebecois because I think that the word separatist is in our vocabulary because there has been 100 years of goddamn inequity, of real persecution and certainly of exploitation, economic and otherwise. And I understand what is happening there.

I have no problem with the Quebecers, because they understand instinctively that I am a soul brother."

He is equally a soul brother to the Israelis.

He invariably wears a gold ornament with the Hebrew word Chai, meaning life, around his neck. He has been honored by the Canadian section of Histradut, the Israeli labor federation. A vocational school in Israel is named after him.

He's got a sharp tongue, but McDermott believes in dialogue with business

McDermott carried his missionary zeal to the vineyards of California in the cause of Cesar Chavez's United Farm Workers Union. The UAW provided the union with its first home when its workers initiated the grape boycott in Canada. The farm union has since revoked the boycott, after its success in signing agreements covering farm workers.

McDermott makes his presence felt by a forceful personality and by personal style. He carries 160 pounds on a 5-foot 8-inch frame, clothed in either a well-tailored suit (he favors a fashionable tailor in Toronto) or sports jacket and an expensive open-necked sports shirt. As his ascent brought the CLC presidency closer, he turned more frequently to wearing a new, dark suit, striped shirt and tie.

McDermott was one of the most vigorous exponents of the CLC's 1976 decision to seek a power-sharing role in the economy through a tripartite arrangement with business and government. So it came as a surprise to many when he recently joined the chorus of union voices repudiating the plan.

McDermott favors high-level discussions between union leaders and chief executive officers of corporations. It rankles him that he has never met the president of General Motors of Canada Ltd., although his union bargains with the company every three years. He disdains many of the subordinates, and especialy lawyers and consultants, who bargain for corporations. Head hunters, he calls them.

It is absolutely idiotic, he says, for corporate heads to turn over major collective bargaining decisions to the industrial relations officials who end up getting the company in trouble.

There is nothing more important to the corporation than its productivity. "Yet, in a lot of instances, the company's economic welfare is turned over to the firm's head hunters."

At the same time, McDermott recognizes that labor people are suspicious of union leaders breaking bread with top management.

"I don't think labor need be afraid of penetrating the ivory towers and talking to the corporate elite, because labor has nothing to fear."

McDermott has been among the labor leaders who have said the removal of controls will not lead to any large wage bubble. With the economy in its present low state, he says, "I think you are going to see a lot of fairly subdued collective bargaining. I think a lot of people have learned some object lessons in the last two or three years."

Although the UAW has had a high incidence of strikes, the decline of strikes under the wage restraints imposed by the Anti-Inflation Board will have a long-term effect, McDermott thinks.

"Working people rather like the idea of not having to go through periodic strikes."

He also bristles when asked what unions will do when controls come off.

"Does anyone ask doctors and lawyers and professionals and the business community the same question?" he demands.

"Nobody has asked the entrepreneurs, the land speculators and those who control interest rates. The very first people they ask is labor. We have about as much impact on what will happen as a fly on the CN Tower.

"What can Canada expect from labor after controls are lifted? The answer is nothing."

The economic environment will take over from where controls left off. High unemployment and economic chaos are not conducive to successful collective bargaining, he says.

Despite some criticism by him of the New Democratic Party that shook the party and some of its labor supporters about a year ago, McDermott is still a staunch supporter of the NDP. But he was infuriated that some provincial NDP governments had gone along with controls.

Zealots of Environment

By STEPHEN LEWIS

(Lewis is the former leader of the NDP in Ontario. He wrote this for the Toronto Star)

I'm fed up to the teeth with seal hunts, Greenpeace missionaries, lurid photographs and letters to the editor fulminating on one side or the other.

Every time I hear the debate raging yet again I feel afflicted by terminal ennui; my eyes glaze and my heart sinks faster than an ice-breaker's anchor.

So this article is a personal exorcism. It's meant to cleanse me, once and forever, of the passions and prejudices surrounding the hunt.

I don't like the Greenpeace people I've met, whether in my office or on the road. As a group, I find them to be smug, smarmy, condescending and fatuous. Some people say that socialists can be insufferably self-righteous; but we are rank amateurs beside these puritans of the environmental gospel.

Greenpeace has now issued a manifesto, modestly called a "Declaration of Interdependence." Ecology is the new ideology: "Like religion, ecology seeks to answer the infinite mysteries of life itself. Harnessing the tools of logic, deduction, analysis and empiricism, ecology may prove to be the first science-religion."

Whew! Who would have known? And lest you think these humble insights will be administered by mere mortals, feast your eyes on this: "We are 'rainbow people' representing every race, every species, every living creature. We are patriots, not of any one nation, state, or military alliance, but of the entire earth."

Can you imagine the poor earthlings in Newfoundland? Even before the seal hunt began, Greenpeace took a full-page ad in the St. John's Evening Telegram to announce: "Greenpeace is dedicated to responsibility for the earth's entire environment, and we will put our bodies on the line for those beliefs anywhere in the world."

Well, in a manner of speaking, I actually ran into some of those bodies just a couple of weeks ago. The entire Greenpeace contingent and I were, coincidentally, on the same plane to Newfoundland.

They were quite a motley mix — mostly young Americans doing their best to look like coureurs de bois, complete with two congressmen, and the obligatory Hollywood starlet to show the rest of us just how serious the matter really was.

(Pamela Sue Martin no less, Nancy Drew of TV fame, considerately fitting in the seals before hurrying to her next rumored contract to pose for a Playboy centrefold. "I hope that in some way I can help create a conscience" is how her press release put it). With no difficulty at all, I managed to sit beside Robert O. Taunt III, the 35-year-old group leader and "American spokesman" for the expedition. And I must admit that my hour-long conversation with him left me better informed, if utterly chilled.

Taunt, like so many others, began with the anti-war movement in the United States. Then it was Martin Luther King, followed by the McGovern presidential campaign. He and his disciples and young Americans who move from cause to cause as a professional career.

I don't disparage the motives, but what happens when the causes run dry?

Seals: That's what happens. Having no consistent social philosophy, Greenpeace turns every new cause, legitimate or illegitmate, into a universal truth and then fashions a transcendent rationale.

In the process human values are distorted, and each issue, whether seals, whales or nuclear power, is given equal and supreme significance. I nearly reached for my oxygen mask when Taunt turned to me and said, with an almost maniacal intensity: "My commitment to this cause against the seal hunt is as great as my commitment against the war in Viet Nam."

It's a very short road from there to other extremist positions. When I suggested that the Newfoundland sealers were being portrayed unfairly to the world as some savage culture, Taunt replied "I have an Aristolian (sic) point of view. I don't believe that any cultural integrity is worth the extinction of a species."

My God, I haven't heard that kind of arrogant sophistry since my undergraduate days in university common rooms. And it frightens me.

For most of my adult life I, too, have been a soppy environmenatalist. But there has to be a sense of balance.

Where seals are concerned, the arguments of the Newfoundlanders and the assurances of many internatinal observers persuade me that the hunt is now under reasonable control.

The Greenpeace opposition betrays an irrational zealotry. Hovering just beneath their non-violent exterior is a streak of impatient intolerance which this world can well do without.

Open Learning Detailed

British Columbia's proposed open learning institute will not compete with existing institutes, colleges and universities, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Tuesday.

McGeer, speaking during budget debate in the legislature, was outlining what shape he feels the institute will take. He said the institute will rely on a proposed educational television network as a teaching vehicle.

University and college leaders have complained that since McGeer announced his intention earlier this year to set up such an institute, few details have been revealed and programs offered by their institutions might be duplicated.

"The task (of the new institute) will be to co-operate and to collaborate, as may be possible, with existing agencies and institutions to the end that the wasteful duplication of effort and resource be avoided," McGeer said.

"A major purpose of the institute is to make available or assist in making available courses, programs, certificates and credentials to those adult citizens for whom geographic and social distance have been factors in limiting or denying participation in learning activities."

McGeer said the mission of the open learning institute is to develop, distribute and provide courses and programs of study. The programs will include:

— academic transfer courses at the first and second-year levels.

— academic courses at the third and fourth-year levels.

— career and vocational courses and programs leading to, or related to, appropriate certificates and qualifications.

— career and vocational up-grading courses and programs.

— adult basic education leading to or related to appropriate certificates or qualifications.

— community education courses and programs related to local and provincial interests and needs.

The minister said the institute will be established under the Colleges and Provincial Institutes Act, and will be governed by a board of at least nine members appointed by cabinet after consultation with colleges, institutes and universities. A principal will be appointed who will serve as the chief executive officer of the board.

FOUR NAMED TO MEDICAL COMMITTEE

Four persons were appointed Tuesday to the province's newly-created Medical Manpower Advisory Committee.

They are: Dr. Blake Thomson of Victoria, representing the British Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons; Dr. James Knickerbocker of Vancouver, of the B.C. Medical Associaiton; Dr. R.B. Kerr of Vancouver, chairman of the health education advisory council; and Dr. D.M. Bolton, senior medical consultant with the Medical Services Plan, who is the government representative.

Murdered to Save Father, Jury Told

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Detroit man, charged with murdering a man whose skeleton was found in a shallow grave in North Vancouver, did it to save his own father from hanging for an earlier murder, a British Columbia Supreme Court jury was told Tuesday.

Wyne William O'Brien is charged with the March 17, 1975 murder of Mike Vasey, who allegedly was involved in a heroin and diamond smuggling operation with O'Brien's father.

The Crown says O'Brien shot Vasey in the back of the head while sitting in a car driven by a companion.

Marcella Shepard, of Detroit, whose son Randy was with O'Brien at the time of the killing, testified that both men left Detroit early in 1975 for here and returned three months later.

"It was midnight when they arrived," said Mrs. Shepard. "I sent them to get cleaned up after travelling and told them to watch TV for a while.

"Minutes later Wyne came to me and said he had something important to tell me. He said 'I killed a man in B.C.' "

She said she did not believe him, but that he went on to explain how he shot Vasey, buried the body in a hole and then covered it with leaves and branches.

Mrs. Shepard said O'Brien told her his father had killed a man in British Columbia and that at that time, the punishment in Canada was hanging.

She said O'Brien told her that Vasey claimed he was owed a large amount of money by O'Brien's father and that, if the money was not paid, Vasey would tell police of the alleged killing.

O'Brien later pondered asking God to forgive him, she said.

She agreed with defence counsel Glen Orris that her purpose in coming here to give Crown evidence against O'Brien was to clear her son's name.

"My boy was involved, but only after the killing," she said. "His mistake was in not going to police after it happened."

Randy Shepard testified later that he was thrown against the windshield from the blast as O'Brien fired at close range at Vasey's head.

"I asked Wyne if he was crazy and he just said, 'Drive on.' He had the look of the devil on him."

NDP Questions Use Of Gov't Stationery

Two Socred cabinet ministers said Tuesday they do not recall ever having used ministerial stationery to solicit memberships for the Social Credit party.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm and Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis made the statements in response to questions from the NDP during daily question period.

Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) and Charles Barber (NDP—Victoria) asked the ministers if they had used government stationery for political purposes, but did not accuse them of doing so.

Barber later said in an interview that "we're not just fishing," but refused to add any details, saying "we're following a time-table."

He did say that more developments could be expected later this week.

Ex-Inspector Given Trapline

VANCOUVER (CP) — A retired inspector for the fish and wildlife branch told a provincial inquiry into the licencing of guide outfitters that his colleagues gave him a trapline when he retired in 1966.

But Walter Gill, 72, denied that he had been improperly issued a guide outfitter's licence, as the inquiry heard in testimony last month.

Gill said that several months after his retirement he moved to the Vanderhoof, B.C. area and applied for a guide outfitter's licence in a territory where the previous guide had died.

He said that normally an applicant for such a licence had to have held an assistant guide's licence for three years, which he did not, but that the branch director was then allowed under the game regulations to waive the three-year guiding requirement if he felt the applicant had sufficient experience.

Gill said he took out very few paying hunting parties but in 1971 branch director Dr. James Hatter told him that he must turn in his licence because it had been improperly issued. He said two members of the branch staff arrived at his house to pick up his licence, which he handed over after much argument.

HOUSING LAND HANDED OVER

The provincial government announced Tuesday the transfer of 20.5 hectares of Crown land to Prince George for a residential subdivision.

The government said in a news release the first phase of the development will contain 149 single-family lots which will sell for $15,000 each, and 30 multiple-family units.

In a separate news release, the government said it had approved a grant of $41,000 for the Greater Vancouver Housing Corporation to provide 10 per cent of the construction cost of a housing development in North Vancouver.

A capital grant in the amount of $20,000 was announced by the human resources ministry to the Prince George Day Care Society to assist in purchasing a home for the Willow Day Care program.

Condemnation And Praise

The education ministry's billion-dollar budget has been met with both praise and condemnation from education officials.

The $1.03 billion budget will give colleges a 23.6 per cent increase in funding and includes provision for $2.4 million for new programs such as distance education, $9 million for independent schools and $1.4 million for expansion of medical teaching facilities.

It also will mean an increase in school costs for property owners through a 2.25-point increase in the mill rate.

Cliff Adkins, president of the B.C. School Trustees Association, said that the government is playing politics with the budget at the expense of local taxpayers.

"It appears the government is financing its two-per-cent reduction in sales tax by reducing the amount of money it is willing to spend on education by passing the burden on to the local taxpayer," he said.

Pat Brady, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, said the 2.25-mill increase to 39.75 is a step, but doesn't go far enough

Late Budget Cost Buyers: Barrett

NDP leader Dave Barrett said Tuesday the unusually late budget introduced by the Socred government this year cost B.C. consumers $40 million in extra sales tax.

Barrett suggested to Finance Minister Evan Wolfe during question periods in the house that if the budget had been introduced in January as usual, consumers would have enjoyed two more months of lower sales tax.

The move to reduce sales tax from seven to five per cent at midnight Monday was announced in the budget speech earlier that day.

The two per cent difference in the sales tax rate was costing B.C. consumers about $420 million a month.

Barrett asked Wolfe if the agreement with Ottawa that the federal government would pick up the revenue loss for six months was reached last September.

Wolfe said only that there were discussions then, but that he didn't know what the federal budget would contain until its release later Monday.

Poor Penalized?

Don Lockstead, (NDP — Mackenzie) accused the B.C. government Tuesday of penalizing the poor, the working man and the unemployed by increasing tobacco and liquor taxes.

"The people who are really getting hurt again are the poor people," Lockstead said during budget debate in the legislature.

"The millionaires on the government side can well afford to pay $5 for a pack of cigarettes, and $50 for a bottle of wine, if they have to," he said. "The poor, the working and the unemployed have a right to a pleasant drink and a good smoke, too."

New Democratic Party finance critic Dave Stupich accused the British Columbia government Tuesday of being a "take-a-dollar, give-a-dime government."

"That's the Socred shuffle we've all come to expect," he said. "It's just like the Vander Zalm zig-zag we saw last year when he took extra Ottawa dollars for the handicapped and only passed on a few cents."

Stupich, finance minister in the previous NDP government, began opposition debate on the $4.28 billion budget presented Monday.

While Stupich said the NDP would not support the government's financial blueprint, Conservative leader Vic Stephens and Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said they support it, although they don't agree with some of the policies.

The budget included a reduction in the provincial sales tax to five per cent from seven per cent, incentives for small business and funding for job creation.

The federal government will provide between $115 million and $120 million to offset the loss of the two percentage points worth $230 million a year. The remainder is to come from increased tobacco and liquor taxes, and other sources.

"This Socred shell game has got to stop or both the economy and public trust in our political institutions will continue to go from bad to worse," Stupich told the house.

He said the province has gone through two very difficult years of unemployment, inflation, tax increases and bankruptcies.

Stupich said the budget "shows no vision of the potential for the province to solve these problems, and become an economically sound partner in the future of this country."

He said the Social Credit government increased taxes, ferry rates, hospital insurance premiums, medical care premiums, ambulance rates, electricity rates and natural gas rates since 1975 for an average of $1,300 for a family of four.

"This government has massively and callously increased the cost of government in this province and now wants to be congratulated for minimal cutbacks forced upon them by the federal government," he said.

Stupich said he supports the tax deduction, but only as a token gesture.

"This government has taken a dollar from us, and now, belatedly and unashamedly, they are giving us back a dime," he said. "And it isn't even theirs, they are getting it from the federal government."

Stupich expressed regret that the province had not accepted the federal offer to finance a three percentage point reduction in the sales tax.

"That only confirms the deep reluctance this government has for reducing the sales tax because this vital step proves how wrong their solutions have been and how much the Socred policies have contributed to B.C.'s accelerating problems the past two years."

He accused the government of camouflaging a deficit financing plan. He said the $76.1 million surplus to be used in job creation programs was obtained by selling off assets inherited from the NDP administration, $48.4 million from the sale of new ferries and the closing of certain special funds in the amount of $29.8 million.

Stupich said the government was ignoring the provincial economy, and doing nothing about the 9.1 per cent unemployment rate, the 90 per cent increase in bankruptcies and the high number of mortgage foreclosures.

Gibson questioned the effectiveness of a sales tax reduction in stimulating the economy, saying an income tax cut would have been twice as effective.

The Liberal leader's greatest criticism of the government centred on its social policies, in particular those of Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

Gibson said that if the government had fulfilled a campaign pledge to index support payments for the 125,000 senior citizens and handicapped in the province, an additional $17.6 million would have been paid out in the last 2½ years.

He criticized Vander Zalm for underspending his budget by $30 million last year and for budgeting for $25 million less this year.

Stephens said he doesn't think the government has accepted its share of the responsibility for the province's generally sluggish economy, complaining that Finance Minister Evan Wolfe is still blaming the NDP for marring B.C.'s financial picture.

He said if B.C. had intended to cut its sales tax regardless of any federal help, then once the federal assistance was forthcoming, the sales tax should have been reduced a futher one percentage point to four per cent.

Stephens also said the legal aid system needs to be evaluated, saying it is often "glorified welfare to some lawyers."

Budget 'Catastrophic'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor said Tuesday working people and the unemployed in the province stand to gain little from the provincial and federal budgets announced Monday.

Len Guy, federation secretary-treasurer, said the federal budget is a stark, conservative statement geared to maintaining the status quo.

He said that with more than a million Canadians out of work and the dollar reaching new lows daily, it is an error of catastrophic consequence to fail to deal with the crisis.

Guy said that instead of a budget providing more tax concessions to the foreign-owned oil industry, the government should have presented a budget pledged to putting Canada back to work.

Guy acknowledged that the provincial government has accepted some responsibility for fighting unemployment, but he said B.C.'s $76.1 million allotment for job creation is merely the logical extension of existing ministerial programs.

Commenting on the two-per-cent reduction in the provincial sales tax, Guy said that B.C. Finance Minister Evan Wolfe showed colossal gall in ignoring the fact that the Social Credit government raised the sales tax to seven per cent from five per cent two years ago.

Track Tax 'Still too High'

The co-president of the B.C. Jockey Club Tuesday critized the provincial government for not reducing its over-all tax on the bettors' dollar from the current 18.1 per cent.

"I'm very unhappy that they didn't reduce the takeout," said Jack Diamond. "I'm not pleased one bit."

Diamond said the provincial government share compared to Alberta and Washington state is a disgrace. While B.C. retains 6.5 per cent of the horseplayer's dollar, Washington takes five per cent and Alberta four per cent.

In its budget presented Monday, the government said it would reduce its eight-per-cent net share of the horseplayer's dollar to 6 1-2 per cent. Half a per cent would assist the B.C. thoroughbred breeding industry while a further one per cent goes to the B.C.-bred bonus for owners.

Reg Ellett, president of the B.C. Thoroughbred Breeders Society, said he had mixed feelings about the budget.

"I'm disappointed that the government didn't reduce the takeout," said Ellett. "They're still taking too much."

However, he welcomed the breeding fund. He said that, based on last year's total handle of $89,347,766 at Exhibition Park, B.C. breeders would realize about $450,000.

Ellett said it is not yet known how the money would be distributed.

Who Should Play God?

There, in full color, was Hafez, a set of test tubes labelled "man," "sheep" and "swine" held in his outstreatched hand — a graphic representation of "the barnyard of the future, complete with farmer." Hafez predicts that fertilized egg cells will one day be routinely deep-frozen and stored for the national space program.

"When you consider how much it costs in fuel to lift every pound off the launch pad," he says, "why send full-grown men and women aboard spaceships? Instead, why not ship tiny embryos, in the care of a competent biologist, who could grow them into people, cows, pigs, chickens, horses — anything we wanted — after they got there? After all, we miniaturized other spacecraft components. Why not the passengers?"

Before this Space Age Noah's Ark blasts off, the artificial womb must first be built to house and care for a fetus during its nine months of development. Incubators can already keep alive a baby born as much as three months prematurely. The key now is to gain control of the first 24 weeks of the growth period, an achievement that Dr. Bernard Nathanson believes will take place within five years. Already, he points out, a few fetuses have been kept alive outside the womb for as long as 18 or 19 weeks, fully half the gestation period.

Dr. Robert Goodlin of Stanford has led the search for an artificial womb for over a decade. In his laboratory he has constructed a pressurized steel and glass world into which a very young fetus can be placed. Inside this synthetic womb, an oxygen-rich saline solution bathes the fetus. Intense pressure — roughly the equivalent felt under water at the depth of 450 feet — literally drives oxygen through the skin of its inhabitant so that the baby's lungs do not have to work.

No fetus has yet survived in the chamber for more than 48 hours. Goodlin is working to solve this problem by engineering a system to draw off carbon dioxide and waste materials that become deadly unless removed.

Across the cuntry in Bethesda, Md., Dr. Warren Zapol and Theodore Kolobow of the National Heart Institute work at removing lamb fetuses from a ewe. Once out of its mother, the fetus' umbilical cord is then hooked up to a device that contains a lung, pump and nutrient supply. Zapol and Kolobow hope that such a mechanism will solve the waste carry-off predicament.

Development of the fetus completely outside the body will open the door for numerous biological modifications during the gestation period. At the Regional Primate Research Centre in Oregon, doctors are already practising fetal engineering on monkeys.

Cutting the mother open, the surgeons remove the entire uterus without losing the precious amniotic fluid, and then lift out the unborn monkey. After a series of electrical and biological tests are performed, the fetus is placed back into the uterus, which is finally sewed back into the mother.

The doctors who have practiced these operatons are not veterinarians, but surgeons from the Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital in New York. They hope to use the knowledge they gain from the Rhesus monkey to conduct prenatal surgery on human fetuses. They reason that if a baby could be raised in a glass womb, necessary operations would undoubtedly be far easier to perform.

Dr. Kermit E. Krantz of the University of Kansas Medical Centre believes such experiments may lead to surgery that could have a dramatic impact on the future child. "It is not hard to see how any malfunction of the placenta could turn a potential Einstein into a mediocrity," he observes.

"If we learn enough — who knows — maybe we can turn mediocrities into Einsteins."

More recently, a federal study contends that "when the techniques for fertilization in the laboratory and genetic intervention can be combined with an effective artificial placenta, the potential for genetic engineering will have been achieved."

Joseph Fletcher, for one, sees test-tube life as finishing the work begun by the contraceptive pill. Because laboratory-created life is "willed, chosen, purposed and controlled" rather than emotionally or accidentally entered into, Fletcher believes that "laboratory reproduction is radically human compared to conception by ordinary heterosexual intercourse."

Fletcher may be right, though many parents might argue with him. What is clear, however, is that test-tube life raises questions for which our current value system and thought patterns provide no ready answers.

When a baby is created from anonymously donated sperm and egg in a laboratory, who are its father and mother? Or does it have any at all?

Is the baby even a human being, or just a product of an imaginative experiment?

Does the new life form have the rights of citizenship? What are the psychological implications of growing up as a specimen, sheltered not by a warm womb but by steel and glass, belonging to no one but the lab technician who joined together sperm and egg? In a world already populated with people with identity crises, what is the personal identity of a test-tube baby?

Some researchers say such questions are for future generations, not for ours. The technical problems of sustaining life in a test tube remain formidable, to be sure, but no more imposing than the problem of landing men on the moon appeared to be in 1961 when that became a national goal. Dr. Bentley Glass estimates that by the end of this century, just two decades away, the first test-tube baby will be "decanted."

At any rate, it is indisputably true that test-tube life will be here much sooner than Aldous Huxley envisioned in his anti-utopian classic Brave New World. Even so, his fanciful description seems portentous:

"In the Bottling Room all was harmonious bustle and ordered activity . . . The procession advanced; one by one the eggs were transferred from their test-tubes to the larger containers . . . Heredity, date of fertilizaion . . . details were transferred from test-tube to bottle. No longer anonymous, but named, identified, the procession marched slowly on; on through an opening in the wall, slowly on into the Social Predestination Room.

"The faint hum and rattle of machinery still stirred the crimson air in the Embryo Store. Majestically and forever the conveyers crept forward with their load of future men and women."

Zeller's Ltd.

Zeller's Ltd. reports consolidated net earnings for the year ended Jan. 28, 1978, of $13,657,210, or $1.03 cents a share, compared with $5,832,191, or 45 cents a share, for the corresponding period in the previous year.

The net earnings for the period include an extraordinary gain of $2,049,675 resulting from the redemption of debentures.

Excluding Fields Stores Ltd., Zeller's recorded a profit of $9,984,073 for the period ending Jan. 28, 1978, compared with $5,832,191 for the year ended Jan. 29, 1977.

James G. Balfour, president of Zeller's Ltd., said the significant sales performance and earnings improvement reflected the impact of the many programs designed to increase sales and profitability which were introduced and strengthened in 1977.

C. Hydrocarbons

Canadian Hydrocarbons Ltd. has reported unaudited preliminary net earnings of $5,936,000 for the year ended Dec. 31 compared with $5,341,000 in the previous year.

Net earnings per share increased by 11 per cent to $1.04 on an average 5,137,631 common shares outstanding compared with the previous year's net of 93 cents per share on 5,129,680 shares outstanding.

Gross revenues for the year amounted to $273,141,000 compared with $262,656,000 a year earlier.

The company said the gross revenues were adjusted to eliminate the operations of Gold Key Forest Products Inc. The action was taken when it was discovered last December that the accounting records of the Gold Key division had not been properly maintained and as a result a material operating loss in the division was not apparent.

Vice-president W. R. Harding said Gold Key's operations have been discontinued and its assets and liabilities are being liquidated.

Canadian Hydrocarbon net earnings reflect a current year loss from the division of $933,000 or 18 cents per share and a further provision of $976,000 or 19 cents per share after tax for estimated losses resulting from discontinuance of the operation.

Harding said Canadian Hydrocarbon's auditors have been unable to complete an audit of the company's books and records for 1977 because of the problems in the Gold Key division.

B.F. Goodrich

B.F. Goodrich Canada Ltd. reports net income of $3.6 million in 1977, up from $3.5 million the previous year. Peter Mason, president, said earnings continued to be depressed because of a lagging economy and anti-inflation board restraints. Sales totalled $195.1 million, up from $183.4 million in 1976.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Legal-aid lawyer Scott Marshall related in provincial court Tuesday an intriguing tale in connection with a California couple charged with trying to obtain birth certificates of deceased persons.

Marshall was representing 20-year-old Peter Glen Powell and his 19-year-old wife, Jeanne Marie, both of 1460 Taunton.

They were charged last Thursday with personation for gain, an uncommon charge, and Marshall entered a guilty plea on behalf of both.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told Judge Blake Allan that both went to the Vital Statistics section with filled-out birth certificate applications under the names of deceased persons which they apparently found at a library. Vital Statistics personnel became suspicious, a check indicated the applications were under the names of deceased persons, and RCMP were advised. Laughton said the couple was arrested outside the Vital Statistics offices.

Marshall began his submission by calling the circumstances "bizarre."

He said Peter Glen Powell was employed by a private security firm in the U.S. and, during that employment, uncovered a cache of weapons, including automatic machine guns.

Marshall said Powell was arrested for possession of those weapons and was in custody when he received a death threat from underground figures who were believed to be owners of the machine guns.

While Powell was still in custody, Marshall continued, he escaped from a hospital and, with his wife, flew to Vancouver. They then tried to obtain enough proof to obtain Canadian citizenship, Marshall said.

Both parties consented to be returned to the United States, Marshall stated, after being dealt with in court and suggested a one-day sentence so that immigration officials in the courtroom could then pick them up and escort them back to the U.S.

Allan accepted the suggestion and imposed the nominal sentence but a hitch developed outside the courtroom when Marshall learned that both would have to face a deportation hearing, which would take about a week.

A 22-year-old who wrote two cheques on his brother's bank account was given a suspended sentence, placed on 12 months probation and ordered to make restitution of $140 to the Royal Bank of Canada, 1153 Esquimalt.

Leslie Allyn Purdy, formerly of 1329 Stanley and now living in Edmonton, pleaded guilty to two counts of uttering forged documents.

Laughton told the court Purdy cashed cheques of $80 on Oct. 26 and $60 on Oct. 28 on the account of his brother, Mark.

"Stupidity, Your Honor," Purdy replied.

William James Louis Todd, 1010 Russell, pleaded guilty to making a false report of a hit-and-run accident to Victoria city police March 25.

Court was told Todd phoned police and told officers another car cut him off and forced his taxi into a telephone pole in the 500-block Bay at about 4 a.m.

When police attended at what was reported to be the scene, they were not able to find any trace. Officers then went to where Todd's cab was parked and inspected the damage. They then took Todd back to the Bay Street scene, where he admitted he struck a pole near the Johnson Street bridge after he spun the rear tires and fishtailed.

Laughton said officers were taken off another accident investigation and wasted about two hours on Todd's false report.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Michael Warren Lane, 19, of 10108 Bowerbank, $250; Richard James McLeod, 20, of 8173 Alec, $150; and George Ferguson, 44, of 1026 Pemberton, $100.

In addition, Ferguson was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work.

Our Top-of-the-Inn revolving restaurant has a fine reputation for its food. And from your table, you and your client will have the finest view in the entire city of Vancouver's constantly changing harbour.

Our revolving restaurant is just one example of how different we are for the business traveller.

Other examples are free indoor guest parking, 7 fully equipped meeting rooms, secretarial service upon request and a free morning paper at your door. We're also central, near all major office buildings and Gastown.

Our rooms are different, too. Extra big and extra quiet, with an extra long double bed, a desk, table and 2 easy chairs so you can work properly, and sliding glass doors to let in the fresh sea air.

So next time you visit Vancouver, stay with us and make your business trip a pleasure.

We're right on the harbour between the Baxter Building and the Board of Trade. Georgia is three blocks away. Burrard just one block east.

Hit Girls, Driver Given Jail

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Stewart Beverley Martindale, 40, was sentenced in provincial court Monday to 45 days in jail after pleading guilty to charges laid after his truck struck two girls in January.

Martindale was sentenced to 45 days, to be served intermittently, for the dangerous driving charge and was given a suspended sentence with 18 months probation for leaving the scene of an accident. He was originally charged with criminal negligence.

Shannon Bixby, 9, and Kimberly Krabes, 10, received minor injuries in the accident.

CLEU Man Resigning For Tonga Bank Post

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ed Hameluck has resigned from the provincial Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit to take a job as security director of the Bank of the South Pacific.

The bank, located on the South Seas island of Tonga, is operated by John Meier, a former aide to American industrialist Howard Hughes.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Tuesday that Hameluck had resigned his $24,000-a-year job in CLEU's research section after signing "an undertaking of confidentiality of information."

Gardom said Hameluck's job with CLEU involved the study of organized crime in B.C.

The Bank of the South Pacific, based in Tonga, has been contracted to assist in the development of the island according to an agreement with Tonga's King Taufa'ahau Tupou IV.

Meier, the bank's governor, came to Canada from the United States in 1972.

Hameluck said his first duties as security director will be to ensure that security at Tonga's airport meets North American standards.

The bank is contracting to build an extension to the airport.

Penthouse Tries Force

VANCOUVER (CP) — The owners of the Penthouse Cabaret applied to the British Columbia Supreme Court Tuesday to force the City of Vancouver to give them the business licences needed to reopen the nightspot.

City council decided April 4 to refuse licences to the cabaret. The council did not give any public reason for the decision but the action followed closure of the Penthouse in 1976 and a prolonged court battle in which the owners were acquitted of charges involving morals offences.

Celebrity Enterprises Ltd., which carries on business as the Penthouse, asked for a court order to quash the council resolution denying it the licences, a writ to compel the city to issue new licences and legal costs.

The petition said the city council acted against the principles of natural justice in refusing the licences, the decision was made in secret and the owners were denied the right to be heard.

It said council acted unreasonably and illegally in refusing the licences and claimed the refusal was because Celebrity Enterprises was charged criminally and not for regulatory purposes.

Judge Gives Youth Break

A 17-year-old Victoria youth, who pleaded guilty to robbery with violence, was given a suspended sentence in county court Tuesday and placed on probation for 30 months.

"You deserve the kind of break I have given you," Judge Leslie Cashman told Bradley Roy Hills, based on a probation report and the submission of defence counsel Ted Hanman.

"I hope I'm right. Only time will tell."

If Hills breaks the law during the next 30 months, he can not only be charged with breach of probation but also brought back to county court for sentence for robbery with violence.

Crown counsel J.W. Anderson said Hills and three others made a plan to rob a pizza deliveryman. Hills phoned Romeo's Pizza and the quartet waited in ambush for deliveryman Reginald Wilson.

When Wilson arrived at a city house Oct. 30, one of the others struck Wilson with a piece of lumber resulting in him now having only 10 per cent vision in one eye and a disfigured face for which he is still receiving plastic surgery. Wilson was relieved of $53 which the four persons later divided among themselves.

Anderson said two of the four persons were older individuals with criminal records. One of them was sentenced to 42 months in the penitentiary. The fourth person, other than Hills, was a juvenile.

Hanman said Hills has learned his lesson, reversed his lifestyle, and the incident was out of character. Hills had spent two "terrifying" months in Wilkinson Road jail before release on bail.

He said it was not necessary to sentence Hills to jail because it would not only be against his interest but against the interest of the community.

There was no suggestion that the plan to rob Wilson would involve anyone being struck, he said. Hills has worked steadily and the probation officer said it was a case deserving special consideration.

Judge Cashman said without any explanation the offence would require a jail term. But he took it from Anderson's comments that there was not an issue with many of the remarks by Hanman.

Hills was "just" 17 when the offence occurred and he was with two persons with criminal records. While he undoubtedly participated in luring Wilson to the area to have money taken from him, Hills was not aware that violence would be used.

The question was how can society's interests best be achieved. Sometimes this is with a jail sentence but that is not the only method of deterrence, he said.

"Surely the interests of society are best achieved by rehabilitation," he said.

In this case, the interests of society had been achieved. Hills had demonstrated a desire to "mend his way and it seems to me it would not be correct in this instance, in these circumstances, that all that is forgotten and you must go to jail. I think this is an exceptional case.

Cashman said Hills is employed and his employer is a former policeman who rehired him after a layoff, knowing about the offence.

Senior Help Gets Update

An updated version of Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber's Services for Seniors publication is now available.

More than 3,000 copies were distributed in the Victoria area last year.

It contains addresses and phone numbers of agencies offering aid and assistance to senior citizens. Copies can be obtained by calling 382-9898 or by dropping in to Barber's office at 1020 Blanshard.

The print is larger than normal and posters are also available for senior citizen centres and other locations.

BOMB MAILED

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Police said Monday they were investigating the discovery of a parcel bomb mailed to an apartment formerly occupied by a nephew of an Indian diplomat. The diplomat, Col. Iqbal Singh, was attacked and kidnapped from his home in Canberra last year, but later managed to overpower his captor and escape.

Women, Young 'Scapegoats' Hit

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs demanded Tuesday the government stop using women and young persons as scapegoats for what they said is a failure to deal with unemployment.

Flora MacDonald (PC—Kingston and the Islands) called on Finance Minister Jean Chretien to "stop this reprehensible practice of making a correlation between women in the work force and unemployment."

Chretien stirred up the controversy Monday night when he referred in his budget speech to the increasing number of women and young persons in the labor force as one of the economic problems of the last year.

"I refer to a fact," Chretien said in his defence in the Commons Tuesday. "I don't think anyone should be offended because I refer to the fact of life."

However, he said the entrance of increasing numbers of women and young people into the labor force is changing Canada's economy and must be recognized. He said this is making it more difficult to create enough jobs for Canadians.

Miss MacDonald said the drastic rise in the unemployment rate for women to 10 per cent this month could be the result of Chretien's earlier statements about the increase of women in the workforce being a cause of high unemployment."

She said the four million working women in this country are working out of necessity, not for pleasure. Many of the 430,000 unemployed women were single, widowed or divorced and have to work.

David MacDonald (PC—Egmont), his party's critic on women's affairs, called on the Commons to "once and for all reject the notion that the entrance of women and young people into the workforce is a basic cause of unemployment."

He failed to get the unanimous consent necessary to have the motion debated.

Paul Dick (PC—Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton) called on Manpower Minister Bud Cullen to start creating jobs for young people.

Cullen said the government is spending $96.2 million this year to create 60,000 jobs for youth.

operation in Metchosin. It would serve the communities north of Duncan.

The law allows juveniles to be placed on such a program as an order of probation set by the court. However it is only a short term program involving four weekends.

Jack said longer-term outward-bound programs may be set up in the summer.

Whatever is decided, Jack said, the programs will have to be open-ended and temporary pending the outcome of the appeal.

Jack said the Supreme Court ruling was not entirely unexpected.

"When the legislation was prepared, there was some question it might be in conflict with the Juvenile Delinquency Act," he said.

"But our legal people felt it could stand as social welfare legislation and we went ahead on that basis."

The legislation gives judges the authority to refer juveniles convicted of serious crimes to the care and control of Commissioner of Corrections John Ekstedt.

The authority was intended to parallel the right of judges to refer children to the care and control of the superintendent of child welfare.

However, Justice Andrews ruled that whereas the superintendent of child welfare is held personally responsible for the care and control of children referred to him, Ekstedt isn't.

And because of that, the containment legislation is unworkable.

Torch Starts House Fire

A propane torch being used by a paving crew accidentally set fire to an Oak Bay house Tuesday causing minor damage.

Fire chief Fred Leeke said the torch was being used to heat the edge of a driveway at the home of David G. Sloan, 2545 Orchard, when it touched off building paper and framing underneath wall stucco and spread to the basement. Damage is estimated at $300.

Suicide Talk Quoted

found, and Madsen replied he shot her and stabbed her in the lungs.

Harmes told the jury that Madsen suggested that the girl's body, because of the lung punctures, may have filled up with water.

He said Madsen also suggested that the girl's body was lighter than the youths' and he had thrown her further into the river and perhaps the body got caught in the main current.

The witness said Madsen told him the victims were unconscious when he stabbed them, but one of them jumped a bit when stabbed.

Harmes said he told Madsen it must have taken a lot of guts and the suspect replied that he wasn't proud of what he had done.

The officer told the jury Madsen said his life had been pure hell in the six weeks following the shootings.

He said the suspect asked him what the victims' parents would think of him.

The officer said he sarcastically replied that he didn't think Madsen would be on their Christmas card list.

He said Madsen laughed and agreed with him.

Madsen has pleaded not guilty to the slayings of Evert Den Hertog, 19, his brother Jan, 16, Bert Menger, 19, and Miss Guliker.

Court also was told how Madsen re-enacted the slayings for police.

RCMP Corporal Al Ellard testified that after the accused had given a written confession of the murders police accompanied Madsen to the scene of the slayings on the shore of the Fraser River.

Ellard, a cousin of Madsen, told the court that police played the roles of the victims while the accused showed police how he shot the four, stabbed them and pushed the bodies into the river.

A ballistics expert with the Vancouver RCMP told the court that microscopic examinations showed that bullet casings found at the murder scene, at the house of the accused and in Cultus Lake were all fired from the same rifle.

Sergeant Richard Bateman testified that the bullets were fired from an old military rifle, which was also found in the lake near some casings.

Bateman said that the wooden stock of the rifle was gone and both the bolt and the firing pin had been ground down.

College Prepares New Look

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Camosun College is ready to give a $6.5 million facelift to its Lansdowne campus, chairman Janet Baird said today.

If the education ministry approves funding, the money will be used to add 100,000 square feet of space to the cramped campus, Baird said.

The project is part of a major plan to turn Lansdowne into a core campus and the administrative centre of the college, she said.

Chances of getting the entire amount from the ministry are good and the college hopes to start construction in January, Baird said.

She said the council has approval in principle from Education Minister Pat McGeer who indicated they should go ahead with plans for the development.

The college council decided at a meeting Tuesday night to ask the ministry for money to hire a project manager and an architect.

The ministry cost estimate is $65 a square foot, but the college beleives the work can be done for less with careful planning, Baird said.

The college hopes Greater Victoria school board will agree to sell or lease its Paul Building and media centre complex.

If this isn't possible, the college will add 40,000 square feet to its ministry request, Baird said.

A long-range proposal for the college's development calls for three major campuses with satellite operations providing services to Sooke, Sidney and other outlying areas.

But completion of the entire plan is a long way off, Baird said.

Right now the college is concentrating on developing Lansdowne, which will house most of the academic transfer and career technical programs.

Renovations and protective work totalling $500,000 has already started and should be completed by August. This work must be done by order of the fire marshal's office if the campus is to open in the fall.

The provincial goverment recently bought Lansdowne from the University of Victoria for $4.5 million, thereby clearing the way for improvements.

For several years prior to the purchase, the college couldn't make any renovations because it didn't have title to the property.

As a result, the campus suffers from a long list of ailments including insufficient storage, classroom and office space and obsolete facilities.

College enrolment has grown rapidly since 1971 and by 1976 had already exceeded projected enrolments for 1978, according to facilities and planning committee report submitted to the council meeting.

$140,000 GIVEN OUT BY ALDERMEN

How Do You Score Grants Game?

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

The taxpayer was the real winner or loser in the annual inter-municipal grants sweepstakes run Tuesday.

More than $140,000 was given away plus another $200,000 or so in tax write-offs.

And what did you get for it? Well, maybe a great deal, but then again, maybe not.

Give yourself 2 points for each organization you think is deserving of public funding. Give another 2 if you or your family might actually make use of the services offered by the group (Will you ever visit the art gallery, for instance?). Give 1 if you think the organization makes a minimal contribution to society but deserves the benefit of the doubt. And subtract 2 for any organization that should be self-supporting and doesn't deserve to dip into the public purse.

If you scored 145 to 116 you're getting excellent value for your tax dollar. Immediately write your council saying you like the way your money's being given away.

If you got 116 to 75 you're still getting a good deal. You may not want to actually write council, but at least you can rest easy knowing your money is not being squandered — at least not on grants.

A score of 75 to 45 is still darn good. You didn't agree with some of those grants, but more than half of them rated three points or better.

At 45 to 29, however, you've got to wonder a little about where your tax money is going. Of course it's hard to decide what organizations are really deserving of public support — all in all you've got to admit the inter-municipal committee and your council representatives tried hard and did a fair job of it.

If you scored 29 to 15 you're not so happy about the way your money is being given away. But you still handed out a few points, so generally speaking you're the type of person who feels taxpayers must shoulder the burdens of society — cheer up, at least the grants committee agrees with you.

At 15 to 0 you've got reason for concern. Write council immediately, listing the organizations that scored negative points, indicating you think some money has been thrown away. (Remember, such an action will cost you at least 14 cents in postage these days — can you really afford to waste any more money?)

If you scored 0 to -30 you should definitely consider running for office next municipal election to try and straighten things out. Good luck.

Anyone scoring —30 to —58 is either extremely bad at math or is just plain mean and stingy. You can write council if you want, but please don't write this newspaper!

Budget: Realtors Differ On First-Home Proposal

The provincial government's proposal to introduce a new first-home purchase plan has met with a mixed reaction from Victoria real estate agents.

Bev Highton, president of the Greater Victoria Real Estate Board, said today the move will increase the availability of housing.

"I think it will open up a number of homes for people," he said.

The plan, announced by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe in his budget speech in the legislature Monday, calls for an increase in the grant for the purchase of a home to $2,500 from $1,000.

But Bruce Copp, manager of Block Bros. in Victoria, said today he doesn't think the boost in the grant will increase the number of homes purchased.

He said the amount of increase is not significant enough to alter people's decision as to whether to buy or not.

Details of the expanded program will not be available until the pertinent legislation is introduced in the legislature.

However, it appears the grant will be more restrictive in that it will apply only to families with children but more expansive as it will be available for the purchase of new as well as used homes.

The existing grant is available for anyone purchasing a new home.

A housing ministry spokesman was quoted Tuesday as saying the new grant will apply to used homes as well but a ministry spokesman today would not comment on the statement.

Highton said although a $2,500 grant will only reduce a mortgage by about $25 a month, the extra money will encourage people to invest in property they wouldn't have purchased before.

But Copp differed, saying in terms of the financing that is available the amount is not significant.

He also said if the grant is only going to be available to families with children fewer people will take advantage.

Bawlf Backs Civic Centre

The $5 million multi-purpose civic centre proposal for downtown Victoria will be fully supported by the provincial government, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said Tuesday.

"All they have to do is ask," said the Victoria MLA in response to statements Monday by municipal politicians that the only hurdle to the project is the government which has not yet okayed a site.

Victoria and the Capital Regional District are proposing a joint project to construct a civic centre adjacent to the Crystal Gardens on Crown land.

Financing has been arranged and if the local governments get the land from the province, construction could start within a year.

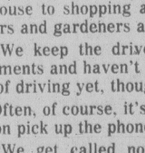

The multi-purpose facility would operate year-round and could be as important to B.C. as Stratford is to Ontario, CRD grants committee chairman Shirley Dowell said.

Bawlf said he hasn't received a request for land for the project which would accommodate conventions and performing and visual arts.

"But I'd be delighted to consider a a proposal if they have one in mind."

So, What's Wrong With Volunteering?

max low

Volunteer.

For some strange reason the word carries a stigma.

Though truly it is better to give than to receive, society tends to regard a little weird the person who will work hours to help others; yet eagerly accepts those of us who work to help ourselves and pocket the financial rewards.

We're a strange lot, we humans. It's got so that even those on the receiving end often have the feeling there's something wrong with volunteer help.

But all that is changing — slowly, says a couple of women close to the volunteer work scene in Oak Bay.

I chatted the other day with Pat Andrews, co-ordinator of Oak Bay Volunteer Services, and Linda Campbell, chairman of the parent body, the Oak Bay Community Association.

"A lot of people who could do with a little help or maybe only just a little company, shy away from us because they feel they're asking for charity," Linda, a busy mother of three, explained. "They say 'We can pay, we can pay' but money doesn't come into it. Really it's just a good neighbor thing."

In fact, the people who run what is one of only two such volunteer services around here (the other is in James Bay) wish there was no need for it.

"Sure, we'd prefer there was no need for such a service," said Linda. "We'd prefer it if people just helped each other without it. But reality is such that the need is there. It has been shown."

LINDA
. . .'need is there'

PAT

A survey in 1976 revealed a host of problems in Oak Bay that were perhaps a little more subtle and less obvious than in other areas, Linda pointed out.

And so, in January 1977, with the aid of an LIP grant, the Oak Bay Volunteer Services was born. It struggled along for a few months as a purely volunteer organization but found it necessary to hire Pat Andrews (she works for three hours a day officially) as co-ordinator.

Today, a little more than a year after it started, the service has 85 volunteers (one-third of them from outside of Oak Bay) who help 100 clients.

Pat and Linda would like to see a lot more people in both categories. And so, when Volunteer Recognition Week is marked officially throughout B.C. April 24 through 29, there will be booths manned at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre and elsewhere to explain how things work to possible future volunteers and clients.

"We want people to drop in and see what we do," said Pat. "We want them to know it's not like a spider's web — you won't get caught!"

Well okay, but what kind of things does a volunteer do?

In Oak Bay, just about anything from helping around the house to shopping and just sitting with someone. But drivers and gardeners are most in demand.

"We keep the drivers for doctors' and dentists' appointments and haven't been able to get into the recreation side of driving yet, though we'd like to," explained Pat.

Often, of course, it's just sheer loneliness that makes a person pick up the phone and call the Volunteer Services.

"We get called now for many little things, though people will never phone and say they're lonely," Linda said.

"To me, changing a lightbulb sums it all up," Pat said warmly. "It's a little thing but there are more accidents with senior citizens doing that than anything else in the home. It takes a volunteer two minutes and they'll probably enjoy staying for a cup of tea and a chat."

"What our service is trying to do is help make the society a little more like what we want it to be," Linda pointed out. "We'd like the elderly to help the young, with advice and babysitting and so on, and the young and not-so-young to help the elderly."

"The ultimate is to help senior citizens stay in their own homes as long as they can," said Pat. "If we can do that by any little help we can give them, then that's better than any nursing home they may be pushed into."

Food Hearings Hope To Start in October

VANCOUVER (CP) — The People's Food Commission hopes its series of year-long hearings will begin in October, commission staff member Jan Morton said Monday in outlining commission objectives.

Morton said most of the commission's work will be done by local volunteer groups across the country and will focus on the the observations of private citizens and local groups.

The main benefit of the commission will come from the local discussions it provokes, rather than from its final report, said Morton.

Spokesman Mary Rawson, a former member of the British Columbia Land Commission, said the people's commission arose from a 10-day conference on food sponsored last year by the United Church of Canada and most of its funding has come from churches and labor organizations.

The concept has been endorsed by the Canadian Labor Congress, the B.C. Federation of Labor, the Consumers' Association of Canada and the United Church.

Rawson, who is one-half of a two-person team that will be travelling around B.C. listening to people complaining about food prices and offering solutions, said she is "one of those people who thinks something is wrong with the food system but doesn't know what it is."

The commission representatives said they weren't undertaking the hearings with a presumption of what is wrong.

Morton said the commission hopes to be able to get ideas from people who didn't feel welcome at inquiries such as the recent B.C. legislative agricultural committee's hearings into food production.

Jack Warnock, a Naramata fruit grower and Rawson's fellow B.C. commissioner, said he attended the legislative hearing in Penticton, B.C. last year and found "they really weren't interested in hearing my brief as a private citizen."

Formal hearings such as those held by the government committee are inadequate, he said, adding that the people's committee hearings will be "as comfortable and relaxed as possible."

The commission plans to hold hearings in 65 communities across Canada.

25% RAISE

VANDERHOOF (CP) — Village council Monday voted itself a 25-per-cent salary increase, the first for the five-member council since 1975.

Village administrator Jack King said the mayor's salary will increase to $3,000 a year from $2,400 and aldermen will receive a $300 increase to $1,500.

Life Term for Hostage-Taker

NEW WESTMINSTER, (CP) — Steven Albert Hall, one of five prisoners involved in a hostage-taking at the British Columbia Penitentiary earlier this year, was sentenced in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday to life imprisonment for his part in the week-long incident.

Hall, 28, was given a life term after pleading guilty to an attempted murder charge, and five years for prison break. Both terms are to be served concurrently with one he is already serving.

Charles Stewart, regional Crown counsel, said outside the court that seven other lesser charges against Hall were stayed by the prosecution.

Five prisoners took 13 hostages last Jan. 28 after an escape attempt from the prison's visiting area failed. The incident ended Feb. 4.

Four prisoners—Andy Bruce, Dave Bennett, Richard Wright and Ralph Saumer—will appear in court May 29 on the same nine charges as Hall.

In addition, two hostages, Betsy Wood, 47, of North Vancouver, and Heather Gay Hoon, 31, of Vancouver, will appear in provincial court here June 12 for a preliminary hearing on charges of attempted murder.

CLUB 'MISLED' IN $3,300 LOSS

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Prince George Jaycees lost $3,300 as a result of RCMP lifting their beer and wine licence for an event Saturday, said secretary Bert Woodcock.

"We had been totally misled Friday when we were told that we could sell tickets for the event at the door," Woodcock said.

He said he has sent a complaint to RCMP Superintendent Gordon Greig asking for an investigation of the matter.

Police said the sale of tickets at the door for such an event is illegal, as is advertising of an event as a beer and wine festival, which the Jaycees had done.

The loss stemmed from rental of the civic centre, advertising costs, and purchase of food which later was donated to the Salvation Army. About 150 of the persons attending the event left when the liquor licence was taken away and the Jaycees refunded half their admission fee of $8.

LRB Steps into Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board has stepped into the dispute between the association representing 10 Interior municipalities and the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Siego Tzogoeff, a negotiator with the Okanagan Mainline Labor Relations Association (OMLRA), said the association was prepared to lock out the 1,100 civic workers, but will not make any move until after a full board hearing here today.

Talks broke off in Revelstoke Monday after the union made a counter-offer on the issue of contracting out and job security. The 27 union members in Revelstoke have been on strike since March 2 and the association served lockout notice last week on CUPE locals in other municipalities.

Union spokesmen Jim Kelly said CUPE was willing to allow the Revelstoke workers to contract out as long as no employees lost their jobs.

He said he thought the union and the OMLRA agreed on the job-security issue but the association asked that settlements must be reached in all member municipalites before any agreement is ratified.

CUPE has been trying to negotiate each municipal agreement individually and Kelly said the ratification matter is unacceptable to the union.

Timmis Heads Sandwell Co.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Denis Timmis, 58, has been appointed president of Sandwell and Co. Ltd, the company announced today.

Sandwell said in a news release that its group of companies provides engineering and management services, primarily to the forest industry.

BAD GAMBLER WINS BIG ONE

BURNABY (CP) — Bonnie Hayes, 30, who along with her husband secured $70,000 worth of credit at Las Vegas casinos two years ago and gambled it all away has won one of the most coveted university fellowships in Canada.

Simon Fraser University announced that Hayes, an honors student, won an Imperial Oil Fellowship worth $5,000. It is awarded to only six Canadians a year and the renewable, three-year scholarship has a potential value of $15,000. Renewing the scholarship is based on high academic standing.

Last December, representatives of several Las Vegas casinos said they extended the Burnaby couple thousands of dollars on credit because they believed the Hayes were wealthy. In fact, they had no money, and the casinos later settled for 10 cents on the dollar to cover the gambling debts.

Hayes, who is confined to a wheelchair, now is completing her fifth year of post-secondary study, her third at Simon Fraser. She intends to continue with graduate work at Queens University, Kingston, Ont., in September.

She worked full-time as a hospital research assistant while taking her first two years of study at Vancouver Community College. In addition to her studies at Simon Fraser, she now is working for Dillon Research Group, a marketing firm in Vancouver.

"I intend to do master's degree work at Queens and will focus on clinical psychology," she said. "It's an area of study in line with my work at SFU."

She already has written an honor thesis dealing with the treatment of sexual dysfunctions.

No Phoney ID In Bank Spree

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who cashed forged cheques for more than $16,000 at Vancouver-area banks during the past three years never used phoney identification, Provincial Court Judge Kerry Smith was told Tuesday.

Lawyer Sheldon Goldberg said John Skogg, of Surrey, rarely tried to duplicate a signature and didn't use any identification during his cheque-cashing spree in which he used names of people who were customers at the bank where he obtained the money.

Skogg, 28, pleaded guilty to 70 charges of dealing in forged documents after the Crown said it would not proceed on 69 other forgery charges. He was remanded in custody to April 25 for sentencing.

Court was told Skogg would take bank statements from mail tables in apartments and rooming houses and, using the names and account numbers obtained, he would write and cash cheques at the bank that issued the statement.

Goldberg said if a teller went to check a signature, Skogg would leave the bank.

Fenske Hero In Comeback

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

It's all very well to be happy in victory, but Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe also wanted to be truthful.

"I really don't think we played very well," was one of the first comments Shupe offered after the Cougars rallied from a two-goal deficit to defeat New Westminster Bruins 4-3 at Memorial Arena Tuesday in the opening game of the Western Canada Hockey League's Western Division final.

That's calling 'em as you see 'em but the Cougars, nonetheless, have the upper hand as the best-of-seven series continues tonight in New Westminster's Queen's Park Arena.

The Cougars have had better games but survived because Victoria's smallest players came up big. Rookie netminder Kevin Eastman, big enough to look at home with bantam teams, came up with the puck-stopping sparkle and five-foot-five centre Dennis Fenske provided the winning margin.

Fenske broke a 3-3 tie with 51 seconds left in regulation time to provide Victoria with its victory and spoil the playoff debut of 17-year-old Tom Semenchuk before 4,452 fans.

Fenske capped a good night for Victoria's centres. Geordie Robertson scored a pair of power-play goals and Gary Lupul counted the other, in addition to two assists.

The eyes were on Semenchuk but Eastman didn't let the rookie from Abbotsford Flyers outshine him. Eastman faced 50 shots and turned away 47, including two clear-cut breakaways by Bruin veteran Stan Smyl.

Eastman also came up with remarkable stops against John Ogrodnick, Boris Fistric, Doug Derkson and Dave Orleski over the route and had little or no chance to stop Bruins' scoring shots by Derkson, Kent Reardon and Scott MacLeod.

Semenchuk and 15-year-old Mike Schamber were the goaltenders New Westminster called up from their Abbotsford farm team because of injuries to regulars Carey Walker and Richard Martens. Walker is sidelined indefinitely with two broken fingers on his catching hand while Martens is hobbled back a back spasm.

If Bruin coach Ernie McLean was worried about his netminding situation, he need fret no longer. On Tuesday's game, Semenchuk seems more than adequate.

Shupe, while admitting the Bruins checked very well, felt his team "did not skate or hit. It almost seems as if we have to get into a hole before we start playing. I felt that was happening tonight . . . after we fell behind 2-0.

"We were making a lot of our plays a second or so late, and that's what happens when you don't skate."

Trailing by two, the Cougars seemed to pep up when Shupe sent little-used Mickey Willgress and Todd Morton. Willgress replaced Mike Shields on a line with Lupul and Curt Fraser and provided some spark with his peppy play. It was his checking that helped set up Lupul's goal to tie the game, 2-2, late in the second period.

Before the game, Leroy Heck, Scott Lang, Bill Jobson, Bob Jansch and George Fritz were listed as sporting minor hurts. All five, however, played. Lang, Jobson and Jansch, in fact, played well and it was Fritz' shot, after a smart pass by linemate Sid Giroux, that set up Fenske's winner.

Semenchuk juggled the hard shot and the puck fell to his feet. Fenske was on the spot to bang it home and avert sudden-death overtime.

Elsewhere, Flin Flon Bombers and Billings Bighorns got off and running in other divisional finals. Flin Flon cut loose with 67 shots and scored a home-ice 7-3 victory over Regina Pats in the Eastern Division series while Billings beat Medicine Hat 6-2 in the Central series.

RED WINGS, SABRES, LEAFS WIN OPENERS

Bridgman Saves Flyers

By The Canadian Press

Colorado Rockies produced one of three surprises in opening games of the National Hockey League playoffs Tuesday night, forcing Philadelphia Flyers into overtime, but came up empty.

"We work 60 minutes and get nothing," said crestfallen rookie defenceman Barry Beck after the Flyers' Mel Bridgman jammed his own rebound past Doug Favell just 23 seconds into overtime for a 3-2 victory in the first game of the best-of-three preliminary round series.

"Maybe it was a confidence builder for the team," said Beck, "but it's a letdown for me."

The Rockies, who won less than half as many games as the Flyers during the season, were underdogs going into Philadelphia.

"This game was a psychological test for us, and I think we passed," said coach Pat Kelly of the Rockies who will be at home to the Flyers for the second game Thursday night.

Other surprises Thursday night were provided by Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs. The Wings scored a 5-3 win over Atlanta Flames who had been slight favorites after a strong season finish. And the Leafs, who won only two of five games against Los Angeles during the season, easily beat the Kings 7-3.

The only result that ran to form was Buffalo Sabres 4-1 win over New York Rangers.

All three best-of-three series resume Thursday night, with Tuesday night's visiting teams becoming the home teams.

At Philadelphia, Rick MacLeish gave the Flyers the lead midway in the first period but the Rockies tied it up six minutes later on a goal by Denis Dupere.

Philadelphia centre Bobby Clarke slipped the puck under Favell from just outside the crease with 28 seconds left in the second period but the Rockies again fought back to tie it at 1:48 of the third period.

That provoked no small amount of uneasiness for the Flyers and their sellout crowd of home fans.

"Darn right I was worried," said Clarke. "When it's 2-2, you have to be concerned. We outplayed them, but that would have been no consolation if they had scored (in the overtime)."

Center Vaclav Nedomansky had a goal and two assists in the three-goal first-period outburst that helped the Red Wings beat the Flames in Atlanta.

"It's a great start for our team," said Nedomansky, a 34-year-old Czechoslovakian import completing his first NHL season. "But I have no special feelings. The playoffs are the same as any other night."

Detroit, in its first playoff since 1970, got power-play goals from Dale McCourt, Errol Thompson and Nedomansky in the first eight minutes and Dennis Hextall added a shorthanded score for a 4-0 lead at Atlanta.

"I expected we'd come back," said Atlanta coach Fred Creighton, "but I didn't expect we'd dig ourselves a deep hole that early."

"They're a good hockey club, but you can't give up four goals that quick and come back," said Red Wings coach Bobby Kromm.

George Ferguson, who scored just seven goals in the regular season, scored three in the third period to tie a Stanley Cup record and carry Toronto past Los Angeles.

Ten other players have scored three goals in one playoff period, the last being Bobby Schmautz of the Boston Bruins, who did it in the first period against Los Angeles exactly a year ago.

"It's simple," said coach Ron Stewart of the Kings. "They played well and we didn't. That's all I have to say."

Ferguson's first two goals boosted the Maple Leafs' lead to 6-0 before Pete Stemkowski connected for Los Angeles.

Ferguson's sniping was typical of the work of several Leafs journeymen who had been inconspicious during the season. Jerry Butler, a nine-goal scorer during the season, had a goal and an assist, and Stan Weir, a 12-goal man, also scored.

Utility forward Jimmy Jones, a penalty killer most of the season, had two assists and provided an effective job of shadowing Kings star centre Marcel Dionne.

"They played a good game," said Buffalo defenceman Jerry Korab. "But you know and I know that we've got the better team, and I think they know it. They played their best, but when we play well, their best isn't good enough."

"They came out and took it to us," said New York's Pat Hickey. "They rushed us and showed us everything. Now we're going to have to go back to New York and do the same thing."

(Summaries are on page 26).

Brewers Put Yanks On List of 'Bombed'

By The Associated Press

Manager George Bamberger holds no illusions about the current hitting by his Milwaukee Brewers, who have scored 49 runs in winning their first four games of the season. But he says it's no fluke, either.

"We can't maintain this pace," Bamberger conceded after the Brewers belted three home runs in outscoring New York Yankees 9-6 Tuesday night. "But I'll tell you this: they know they can win and they know they can hit. And I know they can hit.

"If they score 18 runs tomorrow, it would be no surprise to me."

After sweeping their opening series from Baltimore Orioles by scores of 11-3, 16-3 and 13-5, the Brewers used a pair of two-run homers by Gorman Thomas and a solo homer and two-run double to hand the Yankees their third loss in four games.

The Brewers have hit nine home runs in their four games.

San Diego Padres, on the other hand don't use power batting to win games. Instead they use power fielding.

"You always hear that the best play in baseball is the double play. There's no way, I found out different tonight," manager Roger Craig said Tuesday night after his Padres nipped Atlanta Braves 3-2 with the help of a bases-loaded triple play.

It came in the second inning with the game scoreless with the bases loaded. Braves pitcher Phil Niekro grounded to third baseman Bill Almon, who tagged one runner to start an around-the-horn triple play.

"I figured it would just be a regular around-the-horn double play," Almon said. "I thought, 'Oh, good, we'll get out of this with just onerun scoring.' It happened so quick. It took a couple of seconds and I realized we were out of it with no runs scoring."

Elsewhere, Cincinnati and Los Angeles both suffered their first setbacks of the season, the Reds bowing to San Francisco Giants 3-2 and the Dodgers falling to Houston Astros 1-0. Chicago Cubs downed New York Mets 4-2 in the only other National League game while Montreal at Philadelphia was rained out.

"We have a lot of talent," contended Bamberger. "We're the type of club that if we're losing 5-2, we can tie it up real quick. The second through eighth hitters in my lineup can pop a home run any time. We're in the same class as the Yankees in that respect."

Elsewhere in the American League, Chicago White Sox beat Toronto Blue Jays 9-5, Detroit Tigers defeated Texas Rangers 6-2, Oakland A's blanked Seattle Mariners 2-0 and Minnesota Twins whipped California Angels 8-1.

Champs Top U.S. Fighters

HALIFAX (CP) — Clyde Gray of Toronto, British Commonwealth welterweight boxing champion and Gary Summerhays of Brantford, Ont., the Commonwealth light heavyweight champion, won their non-title bouts against United States opponents Tuesday on a gala Commonwealth Night boxing program at the new Metro Centre which drew 6,300.

Gray, showing machine-like precision punching and speed, scored a fifth round technical knockout over Alfonso Hayman of Philadelphia.

Summerhays, in another 10-rounder, had trouble with clever veteran Hal (TNT) Carroll of Syracuse, N.Y., but opened up in the final rounds to gain a split decision.

Gray knocked Hayman down with a short right to the face in the second round, raked him with combinations through the third and fourth, and finished him off with a flurry of punches in the fifth.

Summerhays and Carroll fought a listless, clinching match through most of the 10 rounds. But the Ontario fighter held a slight edge throughout and finally caught Carroll in the ninth and 10th with smashing blows to the head.

Soviets Win

TAMPERE, Finland (Reuter) — The Soviet Union defeated Finland 4-2 in an exhibition hockey game Tuesday with two unanswered goals in the third period.

Canucks in Rhyme Aren't Worth a Dime

Jim TAYLOR

It was Vancouver Canucks' last home game, and Jeff Knight and his friends decided to put up some signs. "Nothing nasty," he says, "just one or two that kind of summed up their season."

Knight is not a season ticket holder. A young man of taste, he does not wish to be inflicted with the Washingtons, Clevelands, Minnesotas and Colorados of the world. But he and his buddies from North Vancouver are there for the games against hockey teams, and have been for several seasons.

It has been largely a frustrating experience because they really want the Canucks to win. And they wanted to let the team know how they felt about the season just ending.

So they went to work and produced two signs.

Pacific Coliseum:
Heartbreak Hotel

"It was a classy sign," Knight recalls. "Little Canuck crest in the corner and everything. And you have to admit, it kind of said it all."

"If it didn't, the second sign filled in the gaps:

Canuck Goals Against
Or, Eight Is Enough

They got to the Coliseum an hour before the crucial game with Los Angeles Kings, went to their seats, hung the signs, and settled back to watch what they knew in their hearts was the final local National Hockey League game of the season.

"Technically there was a chance of a playoff game," Knight says. "But we had faith."

Then the trouble started.

The ushers had watched them raise the signs. The one in charge of that section even said he liked them, but added that he'd have to get the head usher to check them out "because they're borderline."

The head usher arrived, looked at the signs, and told them the one about the Coliseum being Heartbreak Hotel had to come down "because it could be misinterpreted that you were calling the rink a dump."

Then, says Knight, the head usher had a good hard look at the other sign, turned, and asked: "What group do you work for?"

"Then another guy came along," Knight says. "A big shot he must have been. Suit and tie and everything. He was kind of rude, not like the ushers. He looked up at the Eight is Enough sign and said 'Explain that sign to me.'

"So we told him about the TV show and everything, and he said "I don't understand it, and if I don't understand it I don't think anyone else would. It's got to come down.'

"So he got the head usher to tear it down.'

By this time other fans were beginning to file into their seats—including a Booster Club member who recalled that one of their signs, too, had been deemed not fit for the tender glance of Canuck fandom. That one said:

Hilliard's Hip Will
Put Them in Their Graves

"Whoever's in charge apparently wants only positive signs," Knight says.

So that's what the signs were there for: to promote positive thinking! And all this time I thought they were there either to provide comedy relief or promote a remedial English, spelling and poetry course.

Return with us now and read again the Booster Club Golden Oldies:

Sneptst Has
The Steps!
Dynosaur
Has the Power!
Robifaille
Has the Style!

Our No. 4
Better than Orr

Mr. Orr's solicitor has not yet called.

For the life of me I can't see where Knight's signs were worse than that. They were at least grammatical, and they did not attempt to rhyme Snepsts with steps.

Somehow I doubt the Canucks had anything to do with their removal. With occasional exceptions they have risen above tougher shots than those. Besides, by September they could be so desperate for customers they'll be holding Sign Nights and distributing free paint and canvas at the door.

No, more likely it was someone involved with the Coliseum itself, overzealously protecting a tenant. But it's sort of funny when you think of the signs Knight's group might have painted had it been of a vindictive nature:

There's Nowhere
To Go But Down
Minor Hockey Week
Take a Canuck to Lunch

And if the customers do want to put up signs I suggest the Canucks let them. Because they have only two ways to voice an opinion:

They can hang snotty signs, or they can stop buying tickets. They've hung on for a commendable time, but their patience has been fading.

Two years ago, Mrs. Gerry O'Flaherty had a baby and the Booster Club put up a sign:

A Baby Girl
For Gerry

Up in the stands, there were people who wanted to make the trade.

Bidding Starts at $7 Million

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Heavyweight champion Leon Spinks and former champ Muhammad Ali formally signed Tuesday to fight again for the title Sept. 15, and they were obviously elated over the prospect of additional wealth.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Spinks came closest to revealing the financial deal: "Santa Claus," he said. "Santa Claus."

He also had a quick response when a reporter asked who would get the larger share of the purse: "Uncle Sam."

Promoters expect a $5 million gate from the sale of 85,000 seats in the Superdome.

The bidding for television rights started at $7 million, said Bob Arum, head of Top Rank Inc., which holds the exclusive rights to the match. Butch Lewis, vice-president of Top Rank, said two networks were still in the bidding, but he wouldn't say which or how high the ante had gone.

When Spinks finally worked his way through a crowd of well-wishers and autograph seekers that thronged the room, Ali ducked under a table feigning fear.

He emerged to see a resplendent Spinks, clad impeccably in a beige suit with a rich brown tie.

"You didn't always dress that way," Ali said in mock awe.

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

"We feel that the non-validity of the serious charges and allegations made by the Sierra Club must be made known to the minister and the general public."

A B.C. Wildlife Federation submission to the judicial inquiry into the granting of guide-outfitters' licences by the fish and wildlife branch, still ongoing in Vancouver, pulled no punches.

Speaking as one who has been burned in the past by rash statements emanating from the same Mainland section of the Sierra Club — the Victoria group is a little more level-headed — the submission by the federation didn't come as a great surprise.

In fact, several spokesmen for the Sierra Club here were quite upset when the initial allegations of branch wrongdoing were tabled by the Mainland group.

The federation submission stated:

"In our view, none of the allegations made by the Sierra Club proved true; most were made in spite of information available to them to the contrary, and many were made with nothing more than rumour as foundation."

The federation pointed out that the Sierra Club's statements about overharvesting in the Spatsizi area were based on kill figures in 1975 and they chose to ignore "the fact that quotas of much reduced numbers had been established in 1976."

"They also ignored the assurances given them by both fish and wildlife and parks branch officials in the December, 1976, meeting in Victoria, that quotas would remain in the area and that all hunting would be managed on the conservative side."

"In their June 15, 1977, news release the Sierra Club claims the department was managing the wildlife in Spatsizi without adequate information," says the federation.

They chose to ignore information supplied by the federation on the subject.

"Apparently, our information, which indicated higher wildlife population figures than they initially had, did not suit their needs for they continued to use the original figures. Is it any wonder that the branch or anyone, for that matter, was reluctant to give them information?

Cross-examination of several Sierra Club witnesses in the inquiry revealed several incorrect or misleading statements had been made in their news releases.

"The casual way in which they cast aspersions on people without bothering to check the facts is totally irresponsible," states the federation.

"Such actions by a once-credible conservation organization are reprehensible, in our opinion. All conservation groups really have going for them is their credibility and, a diminution of credibility in one, affects all.

"We are saddened to see this in any organization but particularly in one of the stature of the Sierra Club."

This writer believes that a blanket condemnation of the Sierra Club is wrong because only a few individuals are responsible for the misinformation — the rest of the people involved, both here and on the Mainland, are honest and sincere in their efforts to promote a more rational future.

I'd say it was time for a little housecleaning.

WALTON NAMED TOP PLAYER

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bill Walton, the high-powered centre for Portland Trailblazers, was named Player-of-the-Year in the National Basketball Association Tuesday by The Sporting News magazine.

In a poll of 176 NBA players, Walton was the overwhelming choice for the honor, a magazine spokesman said. It was the first such honor for the leader of the NBA champs.

San Antonio Spurs star George Gervin, who captured the NBA scoring championship this week, was runner-up in the voting. Rookie Walter Davis of Phoenix Suns placed third in the balloting.

The magazine also named an NBA all-star team, of which four out of the five named are former American Basketball Association players.

The squad, which was picked by the players, includes Walton at centre, Gervin at a guard, Portland's Maurice Lucas at a forward, Philadelphia 76'er Julius Erving at the other forward, and Denver Nugget star David Thompson at the other guard position.

Bucks Stage Rally To Claim Opener

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Marques Johnson, with 10 points, and Bryan Winters, with eight, paced a 32-point Milwaukee fourth quarter that gave the Bucks an 111-103 win over Phoenix Suns in the opener of their best-of-three National Basketball Association playoff Tuesday night.

Milwaukee, trailing all of the game, caught Phoenix at 85-all with 10:04 to go in the fourth quarter. The Bucks outscored Phoenix 16-6 in the first 6½ minutes of the fourth quarter to take a 95-89 lead.

Milwaukee, with Winters and Johnson, continued to dominate and outscored Phoenix 22-8 in the first nine minutes of the last quarter.

The Milwaukee lead shot up to 103-91 with 2:02 to go. Phoenix narrowed it to 103-97 with 1:34 left when Winters and Johnson connected once again to put it out of reach.

Phoenix gunned ahead 31-24 on 52 per cent shooting from the floor at the end of the first quarter.

Milwaukee outscored Phoenix 26-24 in the second period and ended the half shooting 56 per cent to 47 per cent for the Suns. But Phoenix still was in front, 55-50.

Titans Blank Foes For Perfect Season

Final matches in the Howard Russell division Tuesday indicate a shift of power in the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

Victoria High Titans completed a perfect, 13-0 season by trimming Oak Bay Barbarians 15-11 while defending-champion St. Michael's University School bowed 25-3 to Claremont Spartans.

The loss left St. Michael's in fourth place.

Titans and St. Michael's, which beat the Victoria High side 17-6 in last year's final for a third straight title, are scheduled to meet in a semi-final Friday in playoffs for the Howard Russell Cup.

Second-place Barbarians and Spartans clash in the other semi-final.

In the league's other division, Parkland Panthers and Mt. Douglas Mountainmen meet in the final for the Lt. Col. Hodgins Trophy April 19 at Carnarvon Park.

Stars Have Bright Record

First United Stars of Victoria are carrying an enviable record into the sixth annual Riverdale Invitational girls' basketball tournament starting Friday in Montreal.

Stars, who leave Thursday, are unbeaten in three seasons of play and have held the British Columbia bantam title for the past two years.

The tourney is a 32-team affair with entries from various parts of Canada as well as the United States, Sweden and Denmark.

Stars, who are coached by Moe Turner and Bev Worth, will be competing in the midget "D" division with Nepean Nationals of Ottawa, Les Patriotes of Trois-Rivieres, Que., and Caledonia (Ont.) Golden Hawks.

The midget category in Quebec and the bantam division in B.C. designate the same under-16 age grouping.

Competition continues through Saturday with the winners of the four midget divisions scheduled to play off Sunday morning. The championship final is scheduled Sunday afternoon.

Turner, who took First United Saints to the Canadian juvenile and junior women's championships a few years ago, has patterned Stars after his old club and Worth was a player on his champion team.

Stars have a nucleus of players who have been together five years and boast three victories over senior "B" and junior women's teams in exhibition games this season.

Playing for the Stars are Cheryl Parsons, Diana Thornton, Marina Scott, Sue Walton, Adrienne Mason, Rachelle May, Lisa McCulloch, Mona McIvor, Teresa Boyd and Laura Piete.

Notts Forest Thwarts Rival

LONDON (Reuter) — Nottingham Forest, unbeaten in English League soccer since last November, prevented First Division rival Manchester City from closing the gap at the top of the standings.

Forest earned a 0-0 draw at City's Maine Road ground and now leads the division by five points with three games in hand over Everton. City is third, nine points behind Nottingham Forest.

Arsenal, which reached the English Football Association Cup final last Saturday, also squandered an opportunity to gain on Forest, losing 2-1 in an away game to Queen's Park Rangers. The win increased the Rangers' hopes of avoiding relegation, although they remained third from the bottom.

In a stormy finish, Rangers' goalkeeper Phil Parkes was attacked by a spectator who was led away by police. The spectator punched Parkes in the back.

Negotiations Successful

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Los Angeles Olympic planners and members of the International Olympic Committee said Tuesday they had overcome misunderstandings over the U.S. city's bid for the 1984 Summer Games.

"My definition of successful negotiations is where everybody feels that they got out of them what they wanted," said Anton Callia, head of the Los Angeles negotiators, who met privately here with Olympic Committee president Lord Killanin and other officials.

"I feel very much leaving these talks that the IOC is happy with us and we are happy with the IOC," he said.

The final decision of where the Games will be held will be made May 17-18 in Athens. Lord Killanin says there are no other formal bids for the Games.

The Olympic committee members were angered earlier this year when Los Angeles indicated in a questionaire that it did not agree with some Olympic rules because they would increase costs of staging the Games.

Acting Mayor John Ferraro sent a letter to the committee saying Los Angeles would make all final decisions and would negotiate radio and television rights in order to void losses such as those suffered in 1976 by Montreal, which went $700 million in the hole staging the Games.

Thomas Keller, president of the IOC international federations, declared in London that the Los Angeles bid was in danger of being rejected if the city did not modify its attitude.

Keller participated for the first time in the negotiations Tuesday and declared at a press conference that he was "happy upon knowing the new response of Los Angeles. We were afraid that no agreement would be reached, but things have been simplified."

KEY: Met.—Metchosin; GM—Glen Meadows; Nan—Nanaimo; Qual—Qualicum; Cow—Cowichan; CH—Cedar Hill; RC—Royal Colwood; V—Victoria; GV—Gorge Vale; U—Uplands; DG—Douglas Golflands; GS—Golf Services; SS—Salt Spring Island.

It took handicaps of six or better, except in two cases, to be accepted into the starting field, which steps out Sunday at Royal Colwood to qualify for match play in the Island's most popular tournament.

Drawn in with 118 six-and-under players were Graham McKay and Al Robertson, a pair of seven handicappers from Gorge Vale.

The field includes seven professionals, including tour players John Morgan and Cec Ferguson, and defending champion Jim Rutledge of Cedar Hill.

And because, as always, there was a heavy over-subscription, the Victoria District instigated a waiting list of five alternates. With the list came this stern warning:

Any player who withdraws without failing to notify the committee (or tournament secretary Leo Derman at Gorge Vale) beforehand will be disqualified from participation in all district events for the balance of the year.

The District Committee also wants to remind all players that BCGA handicap cards, properly attested, must be presented to the starter before teeing off Sunday.

The low 32 scorers Sunday will qualify for the championship flight while an additional 32 golfers will be graded into the handicap division.

First round of match play in the tournament, sponsored by CFAX radio, is scheduled for Glen Meadows April 23. Other rounds will follow on successive Sundays until the 36-hole finals at Uplands on May 14.

Stokes, Verley Win Senior Golf Buttons

Smith Comes Through To Take Goalie Award

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — New England Whalers were looking ahead to the opener of the World Hockey Association quarter-final playoffs. But goalie Al Smith had $2,000 on his mind.

That was the prize for holding Indianapolis Racers to three goals in the WHA's final regular season contest with the Whalers Tuesday night.

He managed it, just, with the Whalers taking a 6-3 victory over the last place-Racers.

Smith earned the Ben Hatskin goaltending award and the $2,000 for himself and fellow Whalers' goalie Louis Levasseur.

"The $2,000 is a lot of dough," said Smith after the victory. "I was worried about goofing it up, not only for me and my family, but for Louis as well."

After Indianapolis scored its third goal in the third period, Smith thought he saw the award money slipping away.

The Whalers meet Edmonton in their WHA quarter-final opener Friday night. Birmingham Bulls and Winnipeg Jets also open their series Friday at Winnipeg while the Quebec Nordiques-Houston Aeros series opens Sunday at Houston.

Canadiens First NHL Team To Sweep Honors Three Years

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens are the first team in National Hockey League history to win each of the Prince of Wales, Art Ross and Vezina trophies three straight seasons.

Rightwinger Guy Lafleur, in winning the Art Ross Trophy as the league's leading point man for a third straight season, became the first member of the Canadiens to win the title three times.

The goaltending duo of Ken Dryden and Michel Larocque provided Montreal with the first three-straight Vezina Trophy championships since Jacques Plante won the award five consecutive times with Canadiens from 1956 through 1960.

The Canadiens won the Prince of Wales Trophy for a record 19th time and finished 16 points ahead of any other team in the over-all point standings.

While things were repetitious for Montreal, a name appears on the Clarence Campbell Bowl for the first time.

New York Islanders ended a four-year reign by Philadelphia Flyers by winning the Clarence Campbell Conference. Islanders were led by their high-scoring line of centre Bryan Trottier, rookie rightwinger Mike Bossy and leftwinger Clark Gillies.

Included among Lafleur's 132 points were a league-leading 60 goals. He led all players in points during the second half of the season with 77, including 32 goals in 40 games. Lafleur, only the second player to score at least 50 goals four straight seasons — Phil Esposito had five 50-goal seasons with Boston Bruins between 1970-71 and 1974-75 — finished nine points ahead of runner-up Trottier. Trottier had 46 goals and 123 points.

The only other player to record more than 100 points was centre Darryl Sittler of Toronto Maple Leafs. He was third with 117 points, including 45 goals.

Bossy became the first rookie to score at least 50 goals, finishing with 53 to become the second 50-goal player of the season — the lowest number since the 1970/71 season.

This is the fourth time in six seasons that Ken Dryden willget his name engraved on the Vezina Trophy. As was the case last season, he shares the award with Michel Larocque. Dryden was the lone winner in 1973 and 1976. Dryden and Larocoque share a total of $2,000.

The pair receive $1,500 as trophy winners plus $250 for each half in which they led the race. Philadelphia Flyers' trio of Bernie Parent, Wayne Stephenson and Rick St. Croix are recipients of $750 as runners-up.

Dryden finished the season with the best personal goals-against average — 2.05 — as Canadiens allowed 183 goals while 200 were scored against the Flyers. Parent led in shutouts with seven.

Canadiens and Islanders will each receive 21 units of $2,500 as conference champions, plus another 21 units each of $2,500 for winning their division titles.

Other division winners also receive 21 units of $2,500, second-place teams receive 21 units of $1,300 and third-place teams receive 21 units of $700.

Badger Resigns As Bulls' Coach

CHICAGO (AP) — Ed Badger, 44, coach of Chicago Bulls, has resigned his post, the National Basketball Association team has confirmed.

A team spokesman said Badger asked to be released from the last year of his three-year contract and the Bulls' management accepted his resignation. Until a new coach can be hired, assistant Jerry Sloan will act as head coach.

Thetis Park Supporters To Dedicate New Trail

Thousands of Victorians on weekends and weekdays are trekking to the city-owned park to see masses of wildflowers in bloom.

Few visitors realize credit for the park's beauty lies with the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association.

But for its members, the park today might be crisscrossed by roads and dotted with homes, says wildflower artist Emily Sartain.

The association will hold a ceremony at 1 p.m. Saturday to mark the opening of a new trail named after the late Dr. Lewis J. Clark, another original member of the association.

A bronze plaque has been embedded in a rock to honor Clark's efforts.

Clark, a chemistry professor at the University of Victoria, was also a botanist and the author of Wildflowers of the Pacific Northwest, considered a classic in its field.

The association, now nearly 800 strong, was much smaller when Clark and other conservationists started the fight to preserve the parkland.

Its first major battle was in 1960 when the city sold more than 100 acres as right-of-way for a hydro transmission line.

While the association was unable to stop the project, the campaign aroused public resistance to further encroachnment, including the sale of another 100 acres for a second transmission line in another area of the park.

There were other attempts to invade the park, including requests for permission to log its trees. And from time to time, land speculators eyed bits and pieces for real estate.

In 1972 the association moved to block the application of Millstream Disposal Ltd. for permission to establish a dump near McKenzie Lake in the Highland District.

Leaching from the dump would have resulted in pollution problems for McKenzie, Prior Lake and Craigflower Creek, all directly affecting the park.

One of Clark's major contributions was to press both the provincial government and the Capital Regional District to recover 245-acres of watershed property adjoining the park.

The public land was sold in the late 1950s by the Social Credit government to a private individual. The land if developed would have polluted the lake.

The NDP government finally re-purchased the land but before it could turn over the property to the city, it was defeated.

The association has now asked the Social Credit Government to either dedicate the land as parkland or to turn it over to the city.

Phillips Praises Belcourt Coal Study

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Tuesday a $10 to $15 million feasibility study of the Belcourt coal property in northeastern B.C. is good news for the province.

Dennison Mines Ltd. and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. disclosed Tuesday plans for a development study of the property located approximately 100 kilometres south of Dawson Creek.

"This supports my view of the great future possibilities in the northeast coal fields," Phillips said in a news release. "The investment of several million dollars shows the industry has confidence in the long-run potential here."

Phillips said preliminary estimates show that the property will produce approximately four million metric tons of high-quality metallurgical coal a year.

PWA Denies Unsafe Claim

CALGARY (CP) — The director of public relations for Pacific Western Airlines said Tuesday night the airline is operating within all of the accepted guidelines established by the industry.

Brian Johnson was commenting on a statement by B.C.Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer Len Guy.

Guy said the Alberta government-owned airline is endangering the safety of passengers by reducing flight attendants on Boeing 737 flights to two from three.

Johnson said in a telephone interview the airline is not compromising safety in any way.

Guy said the move not only brings into question the safety of PWA passengers, but also makes Transport Canada, which approved the airline's application, an ally of management in the dispute between PWA and its 550 ground handlers.

Sex Attractant To Kill Beetles

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The British Columbia forests ministry has announced that it will begin an experimental program to exterminate the spruce bark beetle by luring the insect to its death with a sex attractant.

The ministry said Tuesday in a news release that the insect is a major threat to trees in the Prince Rupert district and has affected thousands of acres of trees in the Smithers area.

About 58 trap trees will be felled in the Houston and Smithers areas and treated with the insecticide chlorpyrifos, the ministry said.

Clem Moore, forests protection officer, said that pheromene, a sex attactant, will be left in a small container on each tree. He said the beetles will be killed as soon as they start to bore through the bark.

Helicopter Logging Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. has been awarded timber licences to log by helicopter two areas along the mainland coast and the northern part of Vancouver Island to determine whether the method is economical.

The licences will enable the company to harvest 40,000 cunits a year in each of the two areas and is the first major test of helicopter logging in British Columbia.

Okanagan bid $2.83 a cunit above the normal appraised stumpage price for timber to obtain the licences.

An Okanagan spokesman said Tuesday the operation will not begin for a few months, but several companies already have contracted to purchase the logs.

He said two helicopters would be used — a Bell 206 to take fallers and ground crew to the site and a larger Sikorsky S-61 to remove the logs.

A B.C. Forest Service spokesman said one condition of the licence is that Okanagan supply the forests ministry with cost data.

Washington, Oregon & Idaho.
The great green adventure land on your doorstep.

Just across the border is some of the most exciting holiday country anywhere, from evergreen forest to open seacoast, metropolis to magnificent mountain range. There are many points of entry... but suppose we begin by following Highway 5, south of Vancouver.

It's less than 3 hours driving time to Seattle, where you'll enjoy attractions like the Space Needle, the monorail and the new Kingdome. From here, a short side-trip takes you to the mountain forests and alpine meadows of the rugged Cascade Range. But for a grand "circle tour", continue on Highway 5 through southwest Washington... crossing the Columbia River to Portland, "the City of Roses" and Oregon's major centre.

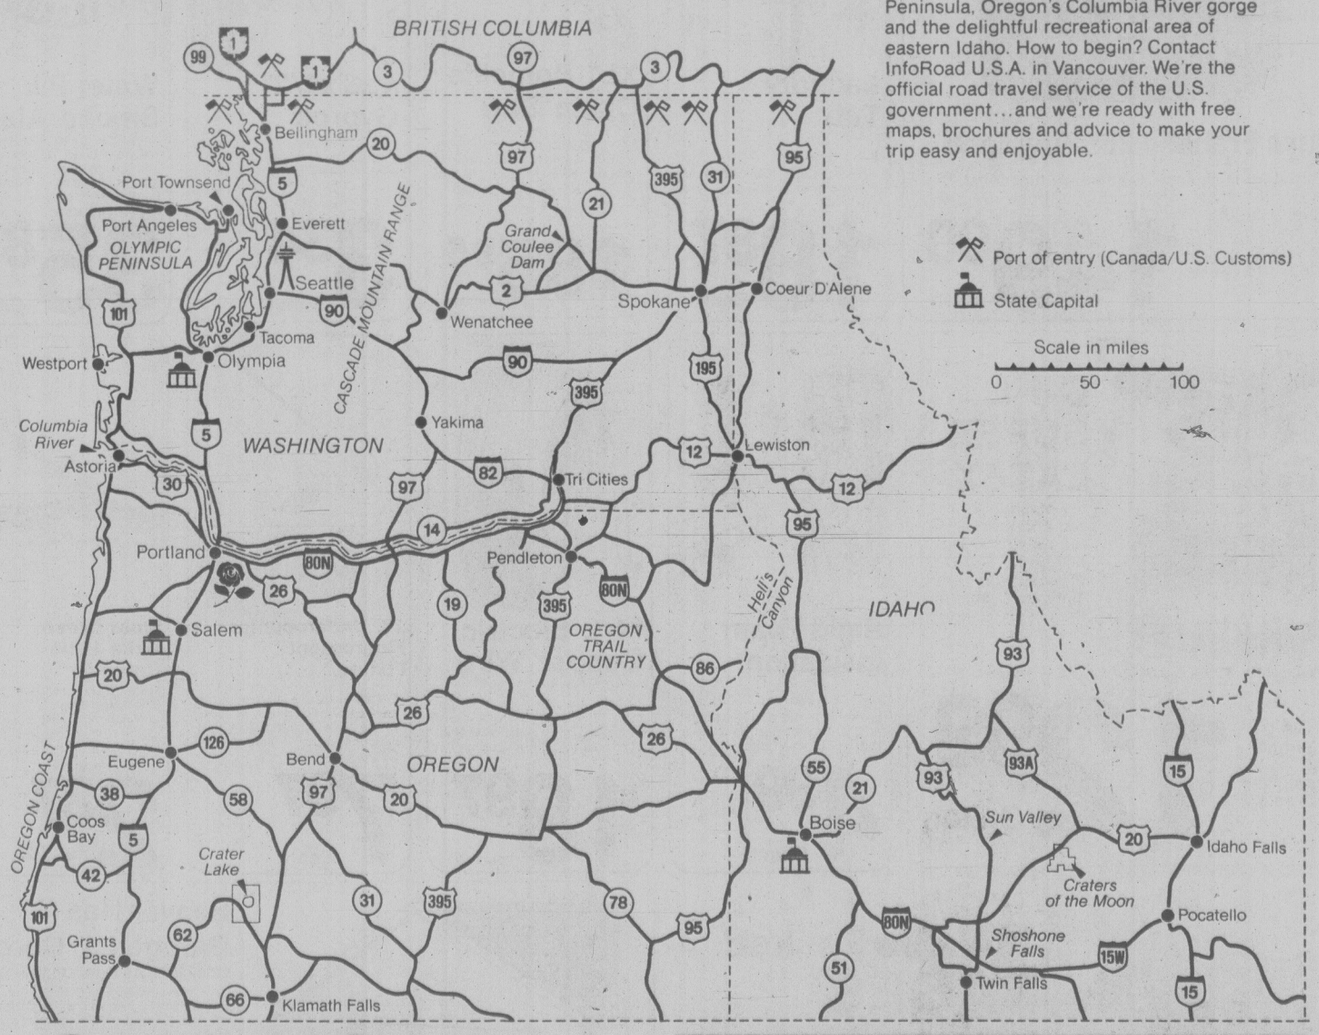

After shopping and sightseeing in Portland, swing west to Astoria and follow the spectacular Oregon Coast Highway route 101, over 400 miles past broad sandy beaches and rocky headlands. Fabulous for fishing, clam digging, beachcombing and savoring the clear sea air. Then head east to the Oregon interior, pausing at Crater Lake before continuing on to southwest Oregon, a totally different landscape that's a mecca for rockhounds.

Turning north, you'll enter the Oregon Trail country, land of round-ups ghost towns and cattle ranches. To the east is Idaho—a state of scenic surprise.

Entering southern Idaho, you can visit the state capital of Boise... then loop southeast and view breathtaking Shoshone Falls on the Snake River (it's higher than Niagara). To the north is Craters of the Moon National Monument, an incredible "moonscape" of volcanic origin, while just beyond here is the famous year-round resort centre of Sun Valley.

On the northbound leg of your "circle", be sure to see Hell's Canyon on the Snake River, North America's deepest river gorge. Then visit the Emerald Empire of northern Idaho before crossing the state line back into Washington. From Spokane, site of Expo 74, you can plan the final portion of your tour: west past Grand Coulee Dam and across the Cascades to the Coast... north across the border to the Kootenays, or northwest into B.C.'s Okanagan region.

We can help you see it all! It's a whale of a trip, but even then you haven't seen the half of it. Still remaining are other vast scenic stretches, including Washington's Olympic Peninsula, Oregon's Columbia River gorge and the delightful recreational area of eastern Idaho. How to begin? # Shakespeare Staged Shakespeare's earliest play and one of his liveliest, The Comedy of Errors, is being presented this week by Glenlyon School.

It will be performed at the school, 1701 Beach Drive, Thursday through Saturday with curtain time at 7.30 p.m.

It's the first time a local school or organization has presented The Comedy of Errors, which concerns a double set of twins and a wild complication of mixed identities.

The all-boy cast will carry echoes of Shakespeare's own time when women were never seen on London's stages. Director of the play is Dougal Fraser.

On the same Thursday through Saturday, at Norfolk House School, 801 Bank, Jean Anouilh's version of the Sophocles drama, Antigone, is being performed. The modern adaptation is directed by Judy Bradshaw with Gina Wilkinson and Lynda-Mary Greene in the lead roles. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Teen Drinking Study Mulled

A federally-funded project to study teenage drinking is being examined by the Saanich school district.

Before trustees allow the study, conducted by two University of Victoria students, to take place they want to make sure all the participants will remain anonymous.

The UVic students have requested permission to conduct the survey among high school students in the district. It is sponsored by the national health and welfare department as a summer work project.

Trustees are worried student confidentiality will be hard to maintain because the 15-page questionnaire asks for information about parents' education, job and income level.

The students are also asked if they take alcohol or drugs, where they take them and their reactions.

It would be easy for an intelligent teacher to put together the pieces of information and identify the student, trustee Gerry Kristianson said.

The board decided to submit the questionnaire to district teachers for feedback and indicated it might attempt designing a similar survey for district schools that protects participants' confidentiality.

BLUNDER BANDIT

LONDON (CP) — Colin Rich, 27 and unemployed, tried to live up to his name, but nothing went right.

His fist mistake was pulling on three stocking masks and a scarf as he entered the bank he wanted to rob.

His disguise kept him from seeing where he was going. After blundering around the bank, he pulled out a weapon which a cashier recognized as a spectacles case.

Swimming Pool Thieves Leave Police All at Sea

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI)—Police in Sydney's western suburb of Bankstown have been called in to investigate the theft of two moulded fiberglas swimming pools weighing two tons.

The police are puzzled not so much as to the difficulty of looking for the pools, but figuring out how the pools were stolen without anyone noticing.

The pools, worth nearly $ 6,600, would have had to be lifted onto a semi-trailer by a crane assisted by several men, the manager of Tranquility Pools of Bankstown, Peter Avery, said Monday.

Avery said the pools disappeared on different dates. "When the first pool disappeared we thought it had been sold, but a week later when the second one was missing we knew something was wrong."

Physics: Chien Shiung-wu of Columbia University.

Medicine: George C. Snell, of Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor, Me., Jean Dausset, Saint Louis Hospital in Paris and J. J. Van Rood of the University of Leiden, Netherlands.

It's Hard to Guard Art from Lunatics

LONDON (AP) — Kitchen knives, hammers and saws, acid, paint and ink, coins and stones, feet and fists—all have come down in recent years upon the fragile and defenceless arts of mankind.

Attacks last week on two great European paintings are new evidence of the dangers to exhibited masterpieces.

"Everything is at risk when the public is let in and only barbed wire might keep maniacs at bay," said security officer Trevor Williams at the National Gallery in London.

The gallery has just experienced the worst attack since it was founded in 1824. Last Monday a man stepped over the knee-high rope between the public and the pictures and carved slices out of Nicolas Poussin's The Adoration of the Golden Calf. The picture was valued at almost $1 million.

Two days later in the Netherlands, Vincent Van Gogh's La Berceuse (The Lullaby) was slashed in Amsterdam's municipal museum. That painting had been valued at around $425,000.

"I am conscious of the risk all the time but it is a risk that has to be taken for the benefit of the entire community," said Williams.

"Paintings could be better protected by glazing them, like the Victorians used to do, but then they cannot be seen so well. Vandalism is harder to guard against than theft because there is no real protection against an attack that takes only seconds."

Williams said vandals "usually turn out to be lunatics and, thank goodness, there are not too many of them wandering about who want to do this sort of thing."

There was no immediate word on the mental state of the attackers last week. An Italian is in custody for shredding the Poussin. Amsterdam police said their man is a jobless Dutchman who sliced the Van Gogh to protest denial of municipal relief.

Both paintings will be repaired. The Poussin "can never again be regarded as a complete and well-preserved example of his work at its greatest," said Phyllis Rowlands of the National Gallery.

Vandals in well-staffed galleries usually are caught. But whoever ran the edge of a coin over Rubens's Adoration of the Magi in 1974 in King's College Chapel at Cambridge, England, never was found.

Art vandals arrested in Britain in the last 15 years included an ink-splatterer, a book-thrower, a stone-thrower and a man who knocked over Italian antique busts in the Birmingham City Art Gallery. They either received small fines or were put under supervision by mental inspectors or probation officers.

The most notorious vandalism in recent Italian history was a hammer attack on Michelangelo's Pieta in St. Peter's Basilica in May, 1972. A bulletproof glass cage now protects the restored sculpture of the Madonna holding the dead Christ.

The assailant, a Hungarian immigrant, was placed under psychiatric care for two years and then deported to Australia, his adopted home.

Above Law, Nixon Argues

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon, in his forthcoming memoirs, says a plan for break-ins and wiretapping he approved as president met "a higher obligation" to the country and therefore was justified and legal, ABC News said Tuesday night.

The network said it was given a few pages from the book — due for publication in May — by the Soho News, a weekly newspaper in New York City. The Soho News said it plans to print the material in its today's editions.

ABC said Nixon claims in the book, as he has before, that an otherwise illegal act becomes legal if it is taken by the president. It said he cited the so-called Huston plan, drawn up by White House aide Tom Huston, as being "justified and legal because he saw a higher obligation."

The Huston plan was withdrawn by Nixon five days after he approved it because of objections by then FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

The report said Nixon cited, as he has before, Thomas Jefferson's assertion that the laws of necessity to save the country when in danger are a higher obligation than the nation's laws.

Nixon cited as precedents the suspension of some civil liberties by Abraham Lincoln during the Civil War and the internment of Japanese on the West Coast at the outbreak of the Second World War.

Doffed Hat for Himself

people

CONCEPCION, Chile — Edmundo Nunez Merino, 59, respectfully raised his hat as a funeral cortege passed, little knowing that he was supposed to be in the coffin. He was spotted by his daughter Monday as she accompanied what she thought was Nunez' body to a cemetery in this southern Chilean city. She later explained to reporters that she had been told her father was dead when she went to visit him in a hospital last Sunday. She made arrangements for the burial. Authorities were left with the task of identifying the body in the coffin.

SASKATOON — John Diefenbaker has been acclaimed to serve his fourth three-year term as chancellor of the University of Saskatchewan, it was announced Tuesday.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Priscilla Presley has won her $750,000 divorce claim against the estate of Elvis Presley. However, details of the agreement were kept secret by Probate Judge Joseph Evans. Beecher Smith, lawyer for the estate of the late singer, said the agreement was "sealed out of respect for the parties." He declined to elaborate, but it is not uncommon for divorce settlements to be kept secret by the courts.

BOSTON — Massachusetts General Hospital says John Wayne is continuing his satisfactory recovery from open heart surgery. "Mr. Wayne slept through the night for the first time since his open heart surgery," hospital spokesman Martin Bander said Tuesday. "He ate a large breakfast. Because of his increased walking, he feels rather tired," Bander said.

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Entertainer Claudine Longet goes to court in Aspen this week — but not as a defendant. Miss Longet, found guilty 15 months ago of criminally negligent homicide in the shooting of pro skier Spider Sabich, is suing another Aspen resident for the alleged non-payment of a loan she says she made in December 1976. The suit, filed in Pitkin County Court, said Miss Longet is seeking $981 from Sonny Smith. The amount includes the alleged loan of $782 plus interest and lawyer's fees.

DETROIT — From now on, singer-actress Aretha Franklin expects to get a lot of respect from actor Glynn Turman. With the Four Tops singing Isn't She Lovely, Miss Franklin and Turman were married Tuesday at the New Bethel Baptist Church. Miss Franklin, whose hits include Respect and Ain't No One, wore off-white satin with a pearl train that stretched seven feet.

LOS ANGELES — A former Egyptian diplomat was sentenced Tuesday to from one to 15 years in prison for killing his wife, Princess Fathia Ghali, sister of the late King Farouk of Egypt. Ghali, 57, was charged with shooting his estranged wife in her apartment here on Dec. 10, 1976, then turning the .25-calibre handgun on himself in an attempt to take his own life. He was sentenced by Superior Court Judge Laurence Rittenband after pleading no contest to a charge of involuntary manslaughter. Princess Fathia, 45, and her mother, Queen Wazil Gouad, were stripped of their royal titles in 1950 because King Farouk disapproved of her marriage to Ghali, a Christian and a commoner.

HUSBAND MISSING, AND SHE REACTED

EDMONTON — A 22-year-old woman who went looking for her husband at the apartment of one his friends never did find him there, but ended up tying a fire hose around the suite's door-knob, sounding the fire alarm, and later driving away in the fire chief's car, provincial court was told Tuesday.

Eileen Burke pleaded guilty to taking an automobile without the owner's consent and to sounding a false fire alarm.

Court heard that the fire chief and a firefighter had arrived at the building in the early morning of Jan. 19 to reset the alarm. They left the car running and Mrs. Burke jumped in and drove away.

Evel Still In Trouble

LOS ANGELES — Evel Knievel walked out of jail early today into a tangle of financial and legal problems. But his publicist says things will be jumping again soon for the daredevil motorcyclist.

Knievel, 38, served a little less than five months of a six-month jail term imposed after after he pleaded guilty to assaulting television executive Sheldon Saltman with a baseball bat.

Knievel said he assaulted Saltman because of material contained in a book Saltman wrote after working as a promoter on Knievel's unsuccessful rocket-cycle leap over the Snake River Gorge in Idaho.

"I feel that the majority of society have understood the reasons for my action," Knievel said. He contended his incarceration would not serve "as a deterrent to others."

Knievel's early release was due to his good behavior, said Sheriff's Lieut. Joseph Race.

Publicist Stan Rosenfield said one of the first problems Knievel will have to face is a civil suit filed by Saltman for an undisclosed sum. Rosenfield noted, however, that Knievel has filed a $210-million libel suit against Saltman and his publishers.

In addition to the legal problems, Rosenfield said Knievel owes about $800,000 in back taxes. And Knievel no longer has money coming in from Evel Knievel toys, after the Ideal Toy Co. discontinued the line because of the nature of his crime.

At one point, Knievel was late in returning to jail. He finally showed up after an all-points bulletin was issued.

Deadly Cobra Part Of Haul

LONDON — The thief who stole a blue-and-cream Land Rover from Sunnyside Road is in for a shock if he opens a box left on the front seat.

It contains a live cobra and its bite could be fatal.

"The fangs of this snake have not been drawn. A bite will probably result in death within 30 minutes," a Scotland Yard spokesman said Tuesday.

The theft occurred in north London where the vehicle was parked on the street overnight. Scotland Yard withheld the name of the snake's owner — or why the reptile was left in the Land Rover.

THEIR GIFT IS CUTTING

DENVER — Zero Population Growth of Colorado is offering the gift that doesn't keep on giving.

The group Tuesday filed with the secretary of state's office for certification of raffle tickets offering, as first prize a "vasectomy for yourself or a friend."

The prizes are to be awarded on Father's Day.

Cuddly-Poo Sweetheart Taken Seriously at Last

By JUDY KLEMESRUD
New York Times

NEW YORK — She still has those big brown eyes, and that button nose, and that wholesome, Big Ten cheerleader face that will probably forever be described as "cute." Still, people don't laugh so much any more when they hear the name Sally Field.

After years of being typecast as America's cuddly-poo sweetheart because of her roles in the television series "Gidget" and "The Flying Nun," the 30-year-old actress is finally being taken seriously. Even comedians like Bob Hope have dropped the Sally Field "Flying Nun" jokes from their repertories, much to her relief.

The main reason was the distinguished four-hour, made-for-television movie, "Sybil," for which she won an Emmy award this year, playing the title role of a mentally disturbed woman beset with 16 personalities. And in her current movie, "Heroes," with Henry Winkler, she plays another serious role as a mixed-up woman who finally finds herself when she helps a troubled Veitman veteran.

"They've finally discovered that the all-American girl next door can also be crazy, wacko," Miss Field said with a smile as she sat in a suite in the Waldorf Towers, sipping white wine.

She was in New York to talk about "Heroes," which received mixed notices even though her reviews were mostly kind. She says now that she wasn't surprised by the reviews, because the people in charge of the film "just couldn't get their heads together about what kind of picture they were making.

"What it is is a light, romantic romp along with the Vietnamese war," she said. "You just don't mix the two. It may make a lot of money, but it's a far cry from wonderful."

Still, the experience of working with Henry (The Fonz) Winkler was a memorable one, she recalled with a smile. "Henry is immensely professional and cares about doing a good job. He is a very serious actor in his heart, and we worked very well together. There were no strange egos or anything. It was strictly the work that was important."

Miss Field, who was wearing a red silk blouse, brown wool pants and tiny pearl earrings, was shy and tentative as she spoke, a self-described "old-fashioned girl" who "lives like a hermit" in her real life. She is surprisingly tiny — 5-feet-2-inches, 100 pounds — and she has a habit of nervously brushing her brown bangs as she speaks.

She decided to do "Heroes" she said, because she felt "burned out" after doing "Sybil." "Talia Shire was supposed to do 'Heroes,'" she said, "but she backed out and they called me. At that point I wanted to do something simple, a nice love story, and I thought this would be a good one to do. It really sounded good: Two people who meet at a time of their lives when they're both going through a lot of turmoil, and through each other they kind of find each other. they make each other think."

Although it was mainly "The Flying Nun" series that brought her fame and fortune, those are the days that Miss Field would prefer to put behind. Yet, when asked to talk about them, she does so not with bitterness, but with mild bemusement.

"I remember the night of the Golden Globe Awards the first year I played the nun," she said, flashing a smile that displayed perfect white teeth. "I was to fly across the Coconut Grove into John Wayne's arms, and I was too dumb to say no. I did refuse to do it in nun's clothes. I did it in street clothes. The thing is, I was a joke, and I allowed it! And, instead of getting a kick out of it, it went right into my heart." (She made a stabbing motion.)

In 1973, after starring in another cloying television situation comedy, the short-lived "The Girl With Something Extra," with John Davidson, Miss Field decided to drop out of sight for a while "for a period of personal and professional reassessment." Between 1973 and 1975, she did almost nothing but go to acting classes in hopes of getting better parts.

Finally, she was offered a part she liked, that of a health club attendant in Bob Rafelson's "Stay Hungry," with Jeff Bridges, an off-beat film about body-building. "Stay Hungry" led directly to "Sybil," which Miss Field regards as the best role she has ever had. "I knew I was the one to play 'Sybil,'" she said confidently, "and the real Sybil herself felt that I should play the part. I never met her, but I was told she had seen me on television, and said I had a lot of the same gestures. I felt eerie about that, and at first I had fears about doing it, because there was so much pain involved.

"Once we started filming, I knew I had done the right thing. I took all the characters and gave them definitions, and walks, and postures, and how they held their heads. Dr. Cornelia Wilbur, who actually worked with Sybil, could come in and watch the dailies, and she said that's exactly the way Sybil acted."

Orange spice cake, dripping with goodies

A Cake to Make Mouths Water

Mary Moore

It is by deliberate intention to make your mouths water that I tell you that as I write this I am eating a piece of Orange Spice Cake and it is delicious. It is made in a 10-inch tube or bundt pan and a glaze, sprinkled with grated or shredded orange rind, is drizzled over top.

ORANGE SPICE CAKE

1 c. butter or margarine, (room temperature)
2 large oranges (grated rind and juice)
1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. cloves
2 c. light brown sugar, packed
4 eggs
⅓ c. orange juice (from oranges above — see notes below)
3 c. unsifted all-purpose flour
3 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt

NOTES: (1) You may substitute diluted fresh frozen orange juice concentrate for the fresh orange juice if desired. (2) If you squeeze two fresh oranges and do not get quite ⅓ cup juice, make the liquid up to ⅓ cup by adding water or diluted fresh frozen orange juice concentrate. (3) If you do not use fresh oranges, you can substitute bottled orange rind.

In large mixing bowl, cream well together butter or margarine, grated rind of 1 orange, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and brown sugar. Beat in eggs until light and creamy. Stir in orange juice. Add flour, baking powder and salt and beat until thoroughly combined, scraping up from sides and bottom with rubber scraper several times. Turn into a greased 10-inch tube or bundt pan. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 55 to 60 minutes until cake tester inserted in cake comes out clean. Remove from oven, cool 15 minutes on cake rack in pan then remove from pan and cool completely. Spread top with glaze. In a bowl beat together 1½ c. unsifted icing sugar, 1 tablespoon buter or margarine, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ⅛ teaspoon salt and about 4 tablespoon milk until of runny consistency so it can drizzle over top of cake from spoon. Sprinkle top with grated rind from second orange or bottled orange rind.

No Need to Fear Poaching

FOOD & nutrition

Washington Post

Everyone can poach an egg, or can they?

It's not hard, but so much of our food is deep-fried and broiled these days that cooks who know how don't get much practice.

Those who are unfamiliar with the technique are likely to avoid a recipe for poached fish or fruit because the term scares them off.

Here's why.

The cook wants to prepare food by giving it a hot bath. Does he boil it, simmer it, poach it? What's the difference? Does the difference matter? What liquid should be used? Water? Wine? A syrup?

"Poaching," the Wise Encyclopedia of Cookery assures us, is done "on top of the stove" in "hot liquid that is kept just below the boiling point." Larousse Gastronomique defines "poaching" as a very gentle simmering in liquid. But James Beard, in his "Theory and Practice of Good Cooking" has decreed that "simmering is perhaps one degree less active than poaching."

Therefore, is poaching a strong — rather than a gentle — simmering?

By eye, it is less than a boil (when bubbles pop all over the surface of the liquid and steam rises) and more than limpid hot water with no sign of bubble activity. Technically, according to Beard, it is "a feeble ebullition," which makes poaching — however imprecise the term — sound pretty sexy.

POACHED ROCKFISH FILLETS
(6 servings)

6 rockfish (or red snapper) fillets
3 cups dry white wine
1 teaspoon salt
2 tblespoons olive oil
4 shallots or spring onions, minced
1 cup canned plum tomatos, drained, seeded and chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon dried tarragon
1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
¼ cup tomato paste
salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons brandy

Pour 2 cups white wine into a large frying pan. Add the teaspon of salt and 2 cups of water. Set aside while making sauce.

Heat oil in a saucepan. Add shallots and cook until soft. Add tomatoes, garlic, herbs and cook until tomato liquid is well reduced. Add wine, bring to a boil, cover pan and simmer gently for 25 to 30 minutes.

Mix in the tomato paste and reduce further if it seems too thin. Season with salt and pepper. (This may be done ahead.)

Bring wine and water to a boil. Simmer for 10 minutes. If the pan has high sides, butter a round of wax paper cut to fit inside and make a hole in centre of the paper. Wash the fillets and fold them in half lengthwise. Be sure water is not boiling, then add fillets to liquid. Place paper atop, cover pan and poach for 5 to 8 minutes, depending on thickness.

While fish is poaching reheat sauce, adding brandy. Remove fillets, drain and place them on plates. Cover with sauce and serve with boiled potatoes and a green vegetable.

PEARS POACHED IN RED WINE
(6 servings)

6 pears, slightly underripe
1 lemon
1 cup sugar
2 cups red wine (mountain burgundy from a jug is suitable)
1 inch vanilla bean
1 stick cinmmon
6 to 8 peppercorns, crushed

Peel the pears and cut them in half. Lift out the cores with a spoon and cut out the stems. Cut 2 slices from the lemon and squeeze the rest into a bowl of cold water. Add the pears and set aside.

Place lemon slices and remaining ingredients in a large saucepan or high-sided frying pan. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally, and simmer partly covered for 10 minutes. Drain the pears and place them in the wine syrup.

Cook, turning once, until pears are just tender to the point of a knife. Allow pears to cool in the syrup.

THIS CHINESE CHICKEN NOT INSCRUTIBLE

Oriental foods have a certain fascination and mystique with many people. However, here's a recipe for Chinese-Style Chicken that has all the flavor fascination, with none of the mysterious preparation techniques. Best of all, it can be prepared in minutes while a pot of rice cooks.

Bite-size chunks of chicken are cooked quickly in oil, while bright green Chinese pea pods (or regular green peas if you prefer) are added the last few minutes. To enhance this delightful chicken dish, prepare a smooth, flavorful sauce which is easily made from an envelope of gravy mix for chicken.

Salted cashews may be added as a garnish, for a dish you'll be proud to serve, even to guests.

Another Oriental recipe to tempt your palate is Shanghai Meatballs. It begins with ground beef and is seasoned appropriately with ginger and onion. Chopped water chestnuts added to the meatballs give them a surprisingly pleasant crunch. In this case, an envelope of brown gravy mix will produce an easily prepared, beefy sauce to complement the meatballs.

Fast and fancy Chinese-style chicken

Either dish may be served with a plate of relishes, a compote of mandarin oranges with pineapple chunks, crispy almond cookies, and of course, a pot of tea.

CHINESE-STYLE CHICKEN

- 4 chicken breast halves, boned and skinned
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1 envelope (⅞-oz.) gravy mix for chicken
- 1 cup water
- 2 teaspoons soy sauce
- ½ cup canned sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1 medium-size onion, thinly sliced
- 1 package frozen Chinese pods or
- 1½ cups frozen green peas
- ¼ cup salted cashew nuts, if desired

Cut chicken into bite-size pieces. Heat oil in medium-size skillet; add chicken and cook 5 to 10 minutes or just until pieces are cooked through. Add contents of gravy mix envelope and water; cook, stirring until gravy thickens. Add soy sauce, mushrooms, onion, and pea pods. Simmer, stirring occasionally, 5 minutes. If desired, sprinkle chicken mixture with nuts before serving. Serve with hot boiled rice. 4 servings.

SHANGHAI MEATBALLS

- 1 egg, beaten
- 1 tablespoon freeze dried chives
- 1 teaspoon giner
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
- ½ cup canned water chestnuts, drained and chopped
- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 tablespoon oil
- 1 envelope (¾-oz.) brown gravy mix
- 1 cup water
- ½ cup diagonally sliced sweet pickles

Combine egg, onion, ginger, salt, garlic powder, and water chestnuts; mix together lightly with ground beef and shape into small meatballs. Brown meatballs in hot oil; pour off excess fat. Add contents of gravy mix envelope and water; simmer, stirring, until gravy mixture thickens. Add sweet pickle. Serve with hot boiled rice garnished with additional sliced green onion, if desired. 4 servings.

Fancy Wraps Not Necessary

A few words out of a radio news item heard just before Easter recalled a newspaper story read in April two years ago. This I found filed away.

Datelined Paris, the story told of one large food chain lowering its prices by using plain white wrappers for groceries, devoid of all advertising.

The story continued that no brand names appear on food items, and the price was "as much as a third less than its brand-named rival."

Our local radio news report (heard only in part) was, I believe, concerning a food chain in Ontario which has developed a somewhat similar approach, and was lowering prices to consumers by selling many foods by generic name only (biscuits or coffee) instead of by brand names.

Anyone who has operated a retail business knows that the cost of wrapping or packaging is likely to equal the cost of production of small items or small quantities. In some cases, the packaging cost is higher.

This knowledge led in the past to small businesses encouraging customers to bring their own containers for food items. Cans with a hinged lid and a handle were taken to the dairy for milk drawn from a large churn; glass bottles with a cork went to the grocery to be filled with vinegar; paper and cotton net shopping bags were taken for many groceries and all vegetables; loaves of bread had no wrappings other than what customers supplied.

Glass medicine bottles were always returned for prescription refills, as were the flat tins with lids used for various staple unguents such as boracic and zinc. Allowance of a few cents was made for these containers, thus lowering the cost to the customer.

These customs were common at a time of low prices and low wages. Of poor sanitation laws, too, some will say, although epidemics of illnesses were certainly no more prevalent than now.

Today in Victoria there is at least one large store whose food department aids customers by putting up many standard food products in plain plastic bags with just the store name and the product name. Weight and price appear as a matter of course. These products are lower in price than those of advertised brands on adjacent shelves in various types of fancy packaging, and with fancy names.

Some people do their shopping by matching the colored packages in store displays with those seen on their TV screen. Or it may be chosen by a catchy brand name repeated on radio so often that it becomes a symbol for the product itself in the same way that Vaseline (a trade name) became the product (petroleum jelly) first manufactured by Cheeseborough years ago. The prices of widely advertised brands reflect the advertising and packaging costs.

The careful consumer today looks for basic foods such as oat flakes, wheat flakes, wheat germ, dried fruits and dried peas and beans — all in the plainest bags and not in fancy packages. Be sure the products suit your needs; substantial savings will be made.

Some areas of food purchasing offer more difficulties for money saving, although it is fairly well known that canned goods and some frozen foods carrying the store's own brand name offer a few cents saving on each item.

Consumers have a choice among food items to get practically what they want. It takes planning, and shopping with a planned list; if you cannot find an item you want, the shelf clerks tell you where to look. If not in stock, they know when it is likely to be replaced.

A request came in for a non-yeast bread, using soy flour with other flours.

"If it has dates, so much the better for the kids' lunch boxes," the request added.

Here is one that we like (when made without the dates) to use for lunch with cheese, salad and soups.

SOY, OAT, WHEAT BREAD

- 1 cup oat flakes
- 4 Tbsp soft margarine
- ¾ cup hot water
- ¼ cup skim milk powder
- 2 Tbsp blackstrap molasses
- 1 small egg
- ½ cup soy flour
- ½ cup wholewheat flour
- 1½ tsp baking powder
- ¾ tsp salt
- ½ cup finely chopped dates.

Into mixing bowl, measure oat flakes and margarine. Pour hot water over these. Stir to melt; add milk powder, molasses and egg. Beat to mix.

Spoon at once into a greased small loaf pan, or into about 14 greased large muffin pans, three quarters full.

Put immediately into preheated moderately hot oven 190 deg. C. for 25 to 30 minutes, according to size.

After 15 minutes, check oven and have ready a piece of foil to cover if necessary to prevent scorching. Bread or muffins should be lightly brown.

The bread is really the better way, for it will slice and can be spread with peanut butter and filled with a piece of Cheddar cheese to make a real tasty sandwich.

Vital Nutritional Steps with Rice

eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

Our Health Protection Branch (the agency in Health and Welfare Canada responsible for the regulation of the quality of food in Canada) has been taking decisive steps the past few years towards up-dating the food enrichment laws.

It began in 1971 with guidelines for new foods that would have their nutritional quality made equivalent to that of foods they may be replacing in the diet. After the completion of the national nutrition survey, Nutrition Canada, Health Protection Branch moved to make the enrichment of white flour, cereals and fruit breakfast drinks mandatory rather than optional.

Another development was the proposed regulations that would improve the quality of the form of iron that is added to foods so that it would be more easily used by the body.

Now, Health Protection Branch is proposing that regular and parboiled rice be enriched with 5 vitamins and 2 minerals to bring their nutritional quality closer to that of brown rice. The vitamins to be added are thiamin, niacin, B6, folic acid and pantothenic acid (all of which are B vitamins). The minerals are iron and magnesium.

This step is timely for a number of reasons:

First, it will result in the improvement of the nutritive value of the many types of polished rice. Although parboiled rice is usually of higher nutritional quality than regular white rice, neither can be said to equal unrefined, brown rice.

Second, this is the first indication that Health Protection Branch is willing to make mandatory the addition of vitamins B6 and folic acid and of the mineral magnesium, all of which have been known to be lost during refining but never before included in the enrichment of either flour or breakfast cereals.

Third, this is probably the first time that regulations are ahead of technology. They will, in fact, force the development of the necessary techniques so that the inclusion of such nutrients will be more certain. The proposal gives industry until the beginning of 1980 to develop the means of restoring thiamin and niacin and iron and the beginning of 1982 for vitamin B6, pantothenic acid, folic acid and magnesium in polished rice.

Rice is such a good and versatile food that it needs to be used more often. It is relatively inexpensive and can be used as a dollar stretcher for other more costly foods.

It has an admirable history, having come to North America in the 1600s. It has formed the basis for some of the more prestigious recipes of the southern United States. Jambalaya, Kedgeree, Pilaff, Beans and Rice, Rice Pudding and plain old Steamed Rice are family and gourmet favourites. The thing to point out here, however, is that rice is a great go-along with almost anything and by doing so manages to enhance the flavor without being a predominant flavor or texture on its own.

Now that we will have white rice enriched to meet the nutritive value of the brown rice, it will be contributing excellent nutritional value as well.

You are probably wondering what to choose until the regulations come into effect. Brown rice is the best bet. It has all the nutrients of the whole grain and has a delicious taste of its own. Your next choice would be the parboiled (one manufacturer calls it "converted") rice. Make sure that the cooking time given on the package is at least 25 minutes because each company puts out an instant or "quick cooking" type. These products are made from refined white rice that has been further processed to make cooking time shorter. In the process, more nutrients have been lost. As we have pointed out before, refined and then processed foods often have fewer nutrients than the natural product.

Refining and processing cost you more too. One cup of brown rice yields 4-6 servings, white rice yields 4 servings, white converted rice yields the same as brown rice but one cup of quick-cooking white rice will give only two servings.

There are three ways of cooking any of the rices and each has a different texture. If you cook the rice in a covered pan it will be fluffy and tender. You may leave it uncovered for a few minutes before serving and fluff it up with a fork.

Leaving the rice in an uncovered pot but using more water for cooking will give firm and tender rice, the type that goes well with casseroles. You don't stir this until almost all the water has gone, then you leave it uncovered on a lowered heat for about 8 minutes. You can over-cook rice and this gives it nuttier flavor. Simply pop it in the oven at 400°F (200°C) with the recommended amount of liquid. White rice will take 20 minutes; brown rice about 45 minutes.

Any rice recipe that calls for white rice can have brown rice as a substitute. Sometimes it is difficult to find brown rice in the supermarket. Ask for it.

It's time the people of Victoria had a better garlic.

This city has always needed a garlic spread with nothing to mix. No butter to add. A whole new kind of garlic.

French's introduces just that. French's never-before, one-of-a-kind, easy to use Steakhouse Garlic Spread. The same spread used by some of the country's best restaurants.

Our great garlic flavour is just right for all kinds of dishes.

On a French stick for garlic bread. Brushed on steaks and hamburgers after grilling for extra zest.

Fry mushrooms in it. Stir it into hot vegetables just before serving. Or, melt it as an instant sauce for shellfish. Use it any way you wish. Next time you're expecting guests or want a special treat for your family, try French's new Steakhouse Garlic Spread. In fact, it would be very sociable for everyone in town to try it at the same time.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: A year ago I met a very handsome gentleman in a shopping centre. (We have identical cars and I was trying to open his car with my key.) There was a strong mutual attraction from the moment our eyes met. We sat in his car and talked for hours. He's 42 and I'm 40. He is separated from his wife (no kids). He lives with his mother, so we can't meet at his place. I'm divorced and have two kids. My mother lives with me, so we can't meet at my place.

On our first date he took me out for a romantic candlelight dinner. Afterwards, we went to a motel. He was wonderful with the preliminaries, but after that he fell asleep (I thought it was the wine).

On our first weekend trip, we stopped at a motel and he asked for twin beds. I was shocked. You guessed it . . . a repeat nonperformance! So far we've been in 11 motels and it's been the same story. A promising buildup, but no performance. He always has an excuse. Either he's too tired or he has a lot on his mind.

Identical Cars But Not Urges

He says he wants to marry me, but I don't want to marry a man who can't satisfy me. What should I do? — BEWILDERED.

DEAR BEWILDERED: Level with him. And ask him to level with you. If his problem is impotency, he should see a physician and do whatever he can to remedy the situation. Many doctors are learning much more about sexual dysfunctions from their university medical school's human sexuality program. I recommend it.

DEAR ABBY: READY TO EXPLORE described my situation perfectly. For years my husband would not come to the table when dinner was ready. I tried everything I could think of to convince him that it was important to me and the children that he sit down and eat with us. Then one day, in desperation while waiting for him to come to the table, I began practising my piano lesson.

The effect was dramatic; he immediately stopped what he was doing, came into the dining room and sat down ready to be served. I couldn't believe it.

The next night I repeated the process with the same results. Today he is always on time for dinner. — NO PADEREWSKI.

DEAR NO PADEREWSKI: Beautiful! (And for those of you who don't have a piano, get a bugle.)

My daughter was once given water pills to help her lose weight. I learned that she's been taking them for two years. She says that she and her friends are able to buy them (they're very expensive) although the doctor refuses to give them a prescription. How dangerous is this nonsense? — Mrs. N.B.N.

DEAR MRS. N.:

"Dangerous nonsense" is the best descriptive phrase one could apply to this illogical weight-reducing program.

One of the most remarkable mechanisms in the body is the balance of fluid for the maintenance of good health. Water balance, with control of the mineral content of the blood, must not be disturbed by the misdirected use of dieuretic, or water, pills.

Under very special circumstances, patients with heart disease, kidney disease, circulatory problems and irregularities in hormone production may retain excess fluid in body tissue. Women, just prior to the onset of their menstrual period, may also retain fluid.

Water pills, used with discretion and under supervision, are very important to reduce the edema (swelling) of retained fluid for the reasons mentioned above.

But a false notion has become popular that water pills are the answer to weight control. This has no validity. Any temporary loss of weight by the elimination of fluid after taking a dieuretic pill is soon replaced when the normal fluid intake replaces it.

"Trading" pills and buying them from greedy exploitative people must be discontinued by your daughter. When a doctor's prescription is marked "non-renewable" it is a safety device to keep patients from over-extending the period of its use and risking potential trouble.

I am a pharmacist. I'm pretty good at deciphering a doctor's handwriting, but some of them are absolutely impossible. I wonder if you doctors take special courses in rotten hand-writing. This is a plea to save our sanity. — J.G.

DEAR MR. G.:

The popular belief that the illegible handwriting of the doctor is purposeful in order that patients will not be able to read a prescription is absolutely without foundation.

It's also untrue that doctors and their handwriting were placed on earth in order to drive pharmacists insane.

I know exactly what you mean, and I, for one, declare myself "guilty." It just seems to me that all the fellows with nice handwriting become lawyers, accountants and stockbrokers. When I leave a handwritten note to my secretary, I'm sure that she takes it directly across the street to the nearest pharmacist, for decoding. Considering the fact that pharmacists are so vital to the health team, may I offer my apologies for the entire medical profession?

'I was framed.'

'Even I can frame a picture.' Barry Bowman, C-FAX 1070 personality. Listen to him every day from 6 am-10 am.

'When the agency phoned me to do this job I was pretty pleased. Until I found out they were looking for the most unhandyman they could find. They wanted to show you folks that anyone can frame a picture. Even me...Mr. Thumbs. Well, of course I can frame a picture. And I had a lot of fun doing it too. The guys at Pandora helped a little bit. They did all the easy stuff like cut the glass and the frame and the mat. I had to do all the hard stuff. Like put it all together. But to tell the truth it was a piece of cake. Just take a look at the finished product. Isn't it handsome? (And think of the money I saved by doing it myself.)

Feeling Ambitious? Make Your Own Pizza Crust

tiny bennett

The first time I ever saw a pizza was in Canada, even though I'd made numerous business trips to Italy over a number of years — the reason being that all my trips were to the north, and the pizza is, or at least was, a southern speciality.

Regardless of its place of origin, this is a delicious dish of universal popularity that is available either hot from the oven, on a take-out service, complete and frozen in store freezer sections, neatly set up in packages for home baking, or of course as recipes for the cook who enjoys working from the basics.

The nature of this open pastry concoction allows for infinite variety of succulent toppings and the package jobs can give young cooks an excellent exercise in cooking, with the knowledge of something good to eat when the pizza is done.

On my shelves I keep a mixed asortment of packets of pizzas, so that my teenager knows she can always bake snacks if she has friends in for company. And given previous warning I pick up a whole range of topping materials, from fresh Italian-type cheeses through to garlicky sausages.

Those pizza packages on the shelves at my supermarket are very good, as my daughter proved the first time I let her loose with one, and with a range of cheese and smoked sausages stowed in the fridge. Only once did she come out of the kitchen to ask my advice: "It says to leave it in a warm place for five minutes," she said, "Is that enough time for it to rise?"

"Just follow instructions," I told her. And she did, and came up with a beautiful pizza with a beautifully crisp crust — I hate that cardboard pastry one gets with commercial pizzas — delicious, bubbly tomato-base sauce with a glorious oregeno tang to it, crusted baked cheese and hot, hot, hot garlicky sausage slices.

It was so good that not only did I have three servings, I later snuck back into the kitchen and cut a big slice from what was left and was chilled in the fridge.

Such basic cheese pizzas that come complete with the crust mix, a can of tomato sauce, and a pack of cheese are terrific to store on a kitchen shelf, because they are simple to prepare and are delicious — very much so indeed if you happen to also have a selection of extras for topping. One can ship up two or three big pizzas in 30 to 45 scant minutes for a crowd that is having a savage attack of the munchies.

But excellent though such pre-packaged pizzas can be, nothing can beat one that is made from scratch. This way it is quite inexpensive, if you don't go overboard in buying imported cheeses and toppings. It quite stuns people that you can turn out your own pizzas, and for my taste delights there are few snack items that are more fun than a thick wedge of crisp pizza with bubbling toasted cheeses, mushrooms, sausage slices, and salty strips of canned anchovies.

This recipe make two or three large pizzas — not round, but fitting onto butter-greased cookie sheets from corner to corner. And since it is quite a hefty serving, you can half it, or reduce by thirds to get what you want. But with a hungry bunch in your living-room, make it in full.

HOME-MADE PIZZA

Sprinkle two packets of dry, active yeast, plus ½ tsp. sugar into 2 oz. lukewarm water. See that the yeast grows in the water, give it five minutes, stir in and set in a warm place for five more minutes to prime, and double in size.

Into a large mixing bowl drop 3½ cups all-purpose flour, 1 tsp. of salt, mix and add the yeast starter to a well made in the middle of the flour/salt. Add 1 cup lukewarm water, ¼ cup olive oil, or vegetable oil, and mix with a fork.

When it roughs up into a flakey ball, turn it onto a floured area and knead it with the heels of your hands. I insist on the "heels" because this uses all your bodyweight.

After about 15 minutes of a better exercise than jogging, that rough-looking, flakey ball of dough will be smooth and satiny, so let it rise to double its bulk in a warm spot covered with a damp cloth.

Set the oven at 500, punch down the dough (it will take 1½ to 2 hours to double), cut off a third, work it up on the board, roll it out and slap it onto a butter-greased cookie sheet. Dip your fingers into cooking oil and spread and pleat the dough to cover the sheet, making a ridge around the outside, to hold in the goodies.

Brush tomato sauce all over, add grated cheeses, decorate with pepperoni slices mushrooms, anchovy strips, very thin slices of fresh green peppers, slivers of onions, or even garlic. Drible on 2 Tbs. of oil, make up the rest of the pizza dough in the same way, and bake in the lowest part of the 500 oven, until the dough is done and the topping is browned and bubbly — from 10 minutes to 30 minutes, according to your oven. You have to keep checking, but it's worth it.

Metrics Behind Schedule

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is running two years behind schedule in its metric conversion program but government officials still hope to complete the changeover by their original target date of December, 1980.

"We think we can make up the lost time in the late stages of the process," says Arch Paton, a spokesman for the metric commission.

The problems began late in 1976. A number of Canadian companies were forced to postpone their conversion to metric measures when it become clear their parent companies, clients and suppliers in the United States were not moving as quickly as expected.

The delay in the U.S. was political. Just as Gerald Ford, then president, was about to put the first conversion arrangements into place, he was voted out of office. Jimmy Carter had to start almost from scratch.

Carter now has nominated representatives for the proposed United States Metric Board and is waiting to have them approved by the Senate.

"Once the United States board is set up, away we go," said Paton in an interview. "But until then, there's not much point for many Canadian firms in going metric if they're still using imperial sizes in the States."

All 100 committees representing sectors of the Canadian economy were supposed to have submitted metric conversion plans by the end of 1976 but as of February only about 50 had their plans approved by the commission, which now hopes the planning phase will be over by the end of the year.

After the plans are approved, the commission still has to schedule the changeover for each sector, then implement the actual conversion to metric measurement.

"The various phases overlap, so we think we can make up the lost time by implementing some of the plans faster than we originally scheduled," said Paton.

It has been six years since the changeover began. For most Canadians, it has meant two major changes to everyday life: They have been hearing weather reports with Celsius temperatures since April, 1976, and kilometres replaced miles on highway and road signs last September.

Although there is a fair amount of metric packaging in grocery stores, the transition has occurred on a product-by-product basis, so the switchover has not had the same impact as the mileage or temperature conversions.

Some food products have already gone metric—sugar, ice cream and milk in most provinces, a number of dairy foods and ingredients for baked goods as well as many non-food items such as toothpaste.

Many others have gone half way, or "soft converted" in the jargon of the commission. They are still packaged in non-metric boxes, bottles or envelopes but a metric measure of the contents appears next to the imperial measure.

Conversion of the retail food sector to the metric system is expected to be essentially complete by 1980.

Most hospitals are on the metric system, practically all prescription drugs come in metric containers and most non-prescription drugs should be available in metric measure by the end of the year.

The shopper rarely bothers to check whether he is buying pounds or kilograms as long as he has similar-sized packages of various brands for price comparisons.

The construction industry made the switch to metric Jan. 1 and all public works contracts — which account for 40 per cent of construction in Canada — must be in metric measurement.

The real-estate industry is also using metres and centimetres. Private homeowners whose measurements are in imperial units will not be asked to recalculate. As soon as they put their properties up for sale, however, their lot sizes and floor-space measurements will be converted to metric units.

One change that consumers are likely to notice is the conversion of gasoline pumps from cents-per-gallon to cents-per-litre, but this is not scheduled to begin until at least January, 1979. Another obvious attention-grabber will be the switch from yards to metres on football fields. But commission officials would not hazard a guess when this might take place.

All official measurements at the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton this summer will be recorded in metric units.

The biggest snag to hit metric conversion so far has been an anti-hectare campaign by Prairie farmers. The idea of measuring their fields in hectares instead of acres upset them so much that the government decided to scrap the plan.

But there were awkward side-effects. The same legislation that was to have introduced hectares was also designed to convert the grain handling industry from bushels to metric tonnes. Both farmers and grain handlers supported this change and were geared to start using tonnes Feb. 1, 1977.

When changeover day came, the bill was still being debated in a parliamentary committee and the switch to tonnes had to be delayed a year. It was not until March this year that tonnes became the official standard of measurement for grain.

Government officials say it is virtually impossible to put a price tag on national metric conversion. The changeover means millions of individual expenditures — a housewife buying new cakepans and measuring cups, a corner-store grocer replacing his scales, plumbers, electricians and other tradesmen replacing their tools, factory owners buying metric machinery.

Some government help is available. The federal government is willing to reimburse workers 50 per cent of the cost of new tools. It also allows retailers who have to replace their scales a 50-per-cent federal sales tax reduction and the option of writing off their acquisitions for income tax purposes in one year.

But in most cases, the individual consumer and businessman are saddled with the cost of metric conversion.

Officials at the commission say the costs of conversion have been exaggerated.

"There was a lot of wild speculation when the announcement was first made," said Paton. "A lot of firms which have converted have been surprised to find it didn't cost nearly as much as they had anticipated."

He explained the pleasant surprise in this way.

By spacing conversion out over almost a decade, the government has allowed plenty of time for normal depreciation. Many firms would have had to replace worn-out machinery, metric program or not. This just means they can buy a metric replacement instead of another imperial model.

But there are drawbacks to the slow-and-steady approach. One difficulty has been to maintain public interest in the program. Another has been that the commission itself has found it hard to keep up with developments coming out of 100 planning committees.

The Bridge Expert

Today's deal is a difficult one to play correctly, and it is hard to fault our South declarer for failing to find the winning line of play. Had an expert been at the helm, however, he would have fulfilled the contract.

Both sides vulnerable.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

West made a good decision when he elected not to open the ace of hearts. Had he made this lead, South would have fulfilled his contract with ease. After ruffing this lead, he subsequently would have discarded his losing diamond on dummy's king of hearts.

After West had opened the club ace, he shifted to the three of diamonds. South realized that West was trying to get East on lead to give West a club ruff, so he put up dummy's ace. He then led a trump to his ace — spurning the finesse — and promptly returned a trump, hoping that the missing trumps were divided 2-2.

But West had three trumps, and after winning the second trump lead with his king, he played a diamond to East's king. East returned a club, West ruffing for the setting trick.

South could have fulfilled his contract at trick three by laying down the board's king of hearts, upon which he would have discarded his losing jack of diamonds. West would have captured the trick with the heart ace.

It would now have been impossible for West to get East into the lead for a club return. A diamond lead would be trumped by South, after which would come the ace of trumps. This would have been followed by another trump to West's king. Upon regaining the lead, declarer would have picked up West's remaining trump.

By playing the heart king at trick three, declarer would be breaking the West-to-East line of communication in diamonds. In effect, declarer would be conceding a heart trick early, instead of a diamond trick (to East) later.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, April 13, By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (MARCH 21-April 19): Real estate or property appraisals command attention. Obtain realistic picture. Steer clear of schemes, substitutes; adhere to factual information and insist on quality. Pisces, Virgo individuals play roles in your personal scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your inquiries, messages get results. One in position of authority sides with you. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. Stick with number 8. Your qualities of determination, basic integrity surface. You'll emerge victorious.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Money, possessions, the finish of a project — these are spotlighted. You'll be rid of burden. You'll perceive potential and be able to do something about it. Aries, Libra figure in scenario. Important project or assignment will be completed. You gain added recognition for efforts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Strive for new starts, independence; find outlet for creative talents. Lunar cycle indicates you'll be at right place at right time. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. You get to heart of matters. You could meet someone who makes your life more exciting and more of a challenge.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have more knowledge than is apparent on surface. This give you a real advantage. One you admire provides data. Handle with care! Aquarius, Cancer persons figure prominently — so do the number 11, 6 and 8.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on friendship, wish fulfillment, social activity. Plan ahead for travel, vacation, writing, advertising or publishing programs. Deal with Gemini, Sagittarius persons. Stick with number 3. Display humor, versatility.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Blockbuster news is due. Be prepared for more responsibility, promotion. Superior gives you definite vote of confidence. You escape from deadly, dull details. Major change, rare opportunity — these are featured.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good lunar aspect coincides now with travel, higher education, philosophical concepts. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius persons figure in your personal scenario — so does the number 5. You'll be on the move, vital and productive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Cut through red tape. Member of opposite sex talks money. Check insurance policy. Get signatures on dotted line. One you are drawn to returns the compliment. Major change at home is due — and overdue. It happens!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lie low, play waiting game, be thorough concerning legal rights and permissions. Steer away from self-deception. If single, there is talk of marriage. If married you rediscover mate in most unusual way. Permit others to have their say while you play your own cards close to chest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Remember family as well as friends. See that people assume responsibilities and pay their debts. You get credit due, possibly in form of promotion. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently — so does the number 8. Reward is coming your way.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finish rather than begin —, create, imprint style, enlarge scope of activities. Aries, Libra figure prominently. In matters of speculation, stick to number 9. Young person plays meaningful compliment. Love is very much in picture.

IF APRIL 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, rebellious, original. You seldom follow the crowd, could have been separated from one or both parents at a relatively early age. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. You may change residence or make significant domestic adjustment this year. September and November will be memorable months.

'Funny Lifestyle' In Lap of Luxury

Its men and women shave their heads and make other major lifestyle changes as a unit in the tradition of religious asceticism but live in comfort and plenty in the tradition of United States business enterprise.

Synanon started as a pioneer rehabilitation centre for drug addicts but has evolved into a religion fuelled by businesses worth $22 million.

"We have a pretty funny lifestyle," founder Charles Dederich says of the communal group's dedication to providing material security through the free enterprise system.

"Our asceticism takes other forms — forms that require internal discipline," Dederich said. "Nobody at Synanon smokes, takes mind benders, takes any booze like I used to. Nobody eats any sugar."

Dederich denies that he dictates lifestyle changes for Synanon members such as a decision last fall for couples to divorce, then form a love match with another partner.

The change of partners developed from concern over the high divorce rate in the U.S., Dederich said.

"He asked what could happen if bunches of people rather happy in relationships in monogamous situations . . . would leave at the peak of satisfaction, part friends at that plane instead of the depths of anger."

He first convinced his daughter and son-in-law to divorce. They "got other mates as other marriages began to fall in line," says Dederich, who also remarried because his wife died of cancer last April.

About 250 Synanon men had vasectomies on grounds that the world is overpopulated, but 64-year-old Dederich didn't.

Dederich says the decision to change partners resulted from "a long dialogue over years."

That dialogue which can evolve into lifestyle changes is the Synanon game, a no-holds-barred verbal jousting match in which members say whatever they want about anyone or anything.

Groups of eight to 16 gather in a circle in comfortable chairs several evenings a week and criticize employers, teachers, mates or even Dederich.

Dederich founded Synanon two decades ago to help drug addicts. Much of the rehabilitation involved working in service stations or selling pencils to support the organization.

RCMP Posses In Alta.

EDMONTON (CP) — The RCMP is recruiting a posse in Alberta.

Solicitor-General Roy Farran said this week the RCMP has been authorized to recruit volunteer deputy Mounties who will be trained, given a uniform and a gun, and sent along with RCMP constables in emergencies.

The minister told a legislature supply committee the posse of men, who are now being screened, will not be paid. The cost of training and outfitting the volunteer force will be about $450 a man.

The move to increase the force in Alberta was made because federal budget restrictions prevent the allocation of additional RCMP constables to the province, he said.

Farran said Edmonton city police are considering training emergency volunteers.

AN INVASION OF BLACKBIRDS

ORLEANS, Ont. (CP) — Residents of this small community near Ottawa are getting out of bed earlier these days, but it's not for deep breathing exercises.

An estimated 10,000 blackbirds have invaded the area, and depending on who is asked they're a smelly health hazard or a minor inconvenience and tourist attraction.

A spokesman for the provincial natural resources department says there is no health hazard from the flock which includes a mixture of redwings, cowbirds, grackles and starlings.

Apparently the birds are attracted to the area because of large pile of pig manure.

It wouldn't be so bad, said one resident, if the birds were of another species that didn't "yell and scream so much," waking up would-be late sleepers at daybreak.

Some businessmen in the area say it attracts customers.

The natural resources department spokesman says the birds will probably leave once the weather warms.

Trio on Board

Dr. Glen Pope, Harvey Mickelson and Mrs. G. Newton-White have been elected to the 14-member board of Victoria Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

Dr. Gerry Guest is president for a second year.

Left Behind, Could He Have Saved the Sub?

KITTERY, Me. (AP) — Fifteen years after the nuclear submarine USS Thresher took 129 men to their deaths, the 130th crew member — who missed the voyage — says he believes he might have saved the ship.

"I'm not a hero and I'm in no rush to die, but I often wish I was aboard on that test," said Cmdr. Raymond McCoole.

The sub was crowded with 129 men that morning, its crew expanded by 41 extra military and civilian technicians — each one specially assigned for the complex tests that lay ahead.

McCoole would have been the 130th man. But just 30 minutes before the Thresher sailed, Capt. John Harvey persuaded him to stay behind. McCoole's wife, Barbara, had been blinded temporarily by an exploding bottle of liniment, and Harvey thought McCoole should be with her.

"Greatly simplified, we believe a small leak developed in the salt-water piping system," McCoole said. "That leak shorted out the electrical circuitry and shut down the reactor safety system."

With its reactor dead, the Thresher could neither rise nor maintain its position — 300 metres below the surface, 350 kilometres off Boston.

Slowly at first, then at a rapidly increasing pace, the Thresher plunged to the bottom, and to the deadly pressure 2.5 kilometres below the surface.

The expertise of McCoole's 24 years aboard submarines is evident as he ticks off the actions he says might have saved the Thresher.

"When the water shorted out the reactor, that power plant was no longer producing heat, but it was still full of steam," he said. "If you diverted that steam to the emergency engine, the rapid cool-down would have destroyed the reactor but I think there would have been enough energy to pull the ship out of the dive."

Norway Catch-Basin for Europe Sulphur

OSLO (Reuter) — Millions of tons of sulphur released from European coal and oil furnaces are killing fish in southern Norway.

Snow melting in Norway's valleys mean another seasonal load of acidic death will flow into rivers and lakes.

The Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development estimated that in 1974, 275,000 tons of sulphur emitted by European industry descended on southern Norway.

Normally, deposit rates are highest around industries producing pollution. But southern Norway gets a much bigger share than more industrialized surrounding regions because its string of mountains and valleys filters the prevailing winds, constantly removing industrial dirt.

At the same time, Norway has soft-water lakes unable to neutralize sulphurous acids formed when sulphur dioxide mixes with water.

In wide areas of Norway the fish catch is down to one-tenth of what it was 10 years ago. In some places fish populations have disappeared.

Erik Lykke, a director at Norway's environment ministry, said sulphur and associated pollutants have been linked to several categories of human disease.

Sulphur is extremely corrosive, damages vegetation and is thought to be causing decreased tree growth throughout Scandinavia.

Reports of damage to trees and fish first appeared in the late 1960s. Now, said Lykke, scientists are preparing to fight back with an experiment using lime to neutralize some of the incoming acid.

But Norway places more hope in international action, such as the UN Economic Commission for Europe, which meets in Geneva this month to prepare for an all-European conference of environment ministers in 1979.

The commission will also draft an agreement on reducing sulphur-emission levels from European industries.

Lykke says the fact that sulphur concentrations are reaching unacceptable levels for the emitting states themselves has improved chances of fruitful progress towards an all-European convention.

It is estimated that more than 60 million tons of sulphur are emitted annually over Europe.

G. A. Persson of the Swedish Environment Protection Board said desulphurization of fuels and technical control of emissions might reduce this to 25 million tons annually.

But this could cost at least $250 per ton of sulphur, giving a total annual cost of $8.7 billion.

Alderman Marches Out To Protest Easy Grants

Esquimalt Ald. Colin Blair walked out of a Greater Victoria Inter-municipal committee meeting Tuesday to protest the way grants were being made — but the committee went ahead without him and awarded over $300,000 in cash or tax write-offs.

Some 47 requests were vetted by the committee with 29 receiving some form of financial support. Few got what they requested and many, like the Victoria Rape Relief Centre, didn't get a penny.

The decision of the committee is not absolutely final, as the various municipalities must now approve the grants.

It would be unusual for the committee to be over-ruled, however.

Blair marched out of the meeting after protesting that he didn't have enough information on the various groups.

"My worst fears about turning grant vetting over to a sub-committee have now been realized. The information provided for us in the report prepared by the sub-committee is scant to say the least," Blair said.

"I would not be prepared to commit my own private funds merely on the basis of the little information we have before us and I'm certainly not prepared to commit tens of thousands of taxpayers' dollars. The financial status and operation of the organizations seeking grants remains a mystery to me."

In an interview today, Blair said he intends to raise the matter with Esquimalt council, and will urge that no grants be made until the various organizations have been studied more closely.

"One thing that particularly disturbs me is that the Maritime Museum (of B.C.) received a grant — they didn't even appear on the list given me by the sub-committee," said Blair.

The museum asked for and got $15,000. Its request for financial support last year was rejected by the committee. The museum item was the only one dealt with in camera.

The biggest winner in the grants game was the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, which was given $60,000 after requesting $75,000.

The Bastion Theatre Studio Society was another major recipient, being awarded $17,500 after a request for $49,728. The society got $16,747 in 1977.

The Victoria Rape Relief Centre's request, which was declined last year, was turned down again for 1978.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier and Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell both opposed the centre, saying they think its services were merely a duplication of Need — Victoria's Crisis Line.

The Crisis Line is a phone-in operation where people in distress can get counselling or advice on personal problems while remaining anonymous if they wish. The Rape Centre deals with victims of sexual attack, providing guidance on both legal and emotional matters.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young supported the motion to reject the Rape Centre grant request, but said "They are essentially different operations. One provides telephone counsel, while the other deals with the individual in more depth."

Young said, however, that the centre should be run by the provincial government and not the municipalities.

"I believe that this type of work is a vital function of provincial health and welfare care facilities . . . it should be organized and run by provincial authorities and if they haven't done so already they ought to," said Young.

The centre asked for $16,563.

Some 16 organizations asked that their taxes be written off in place of a cash grant and only two, the Fernwood House Society and the Greater Victoria Nursery School Society, were turned down.

Figures for individual tax requests were unavailable, but an estimated $205,258 was involved in total.

About $141,000 was awarded in cash grants.

City Team Winners At Bridge

A Victoria team beat out 399 others in competition at Tacoma to become the champions of Alaska, B.C. and Washington in the American Contract Bridge League.

Captain of the team is Jim McAvoy. Also on the team are Gordon McOrmond, Lauren Miller and Duncan Smith, all of Victoria, and Lawrence Betts and Garry Harper of Vancouver. Under competition rules four members of the team must be from the home town.

Former B.C. champions, the weekend's win entitles the Victoria team to compete in the western North American championships, to be held June 10.

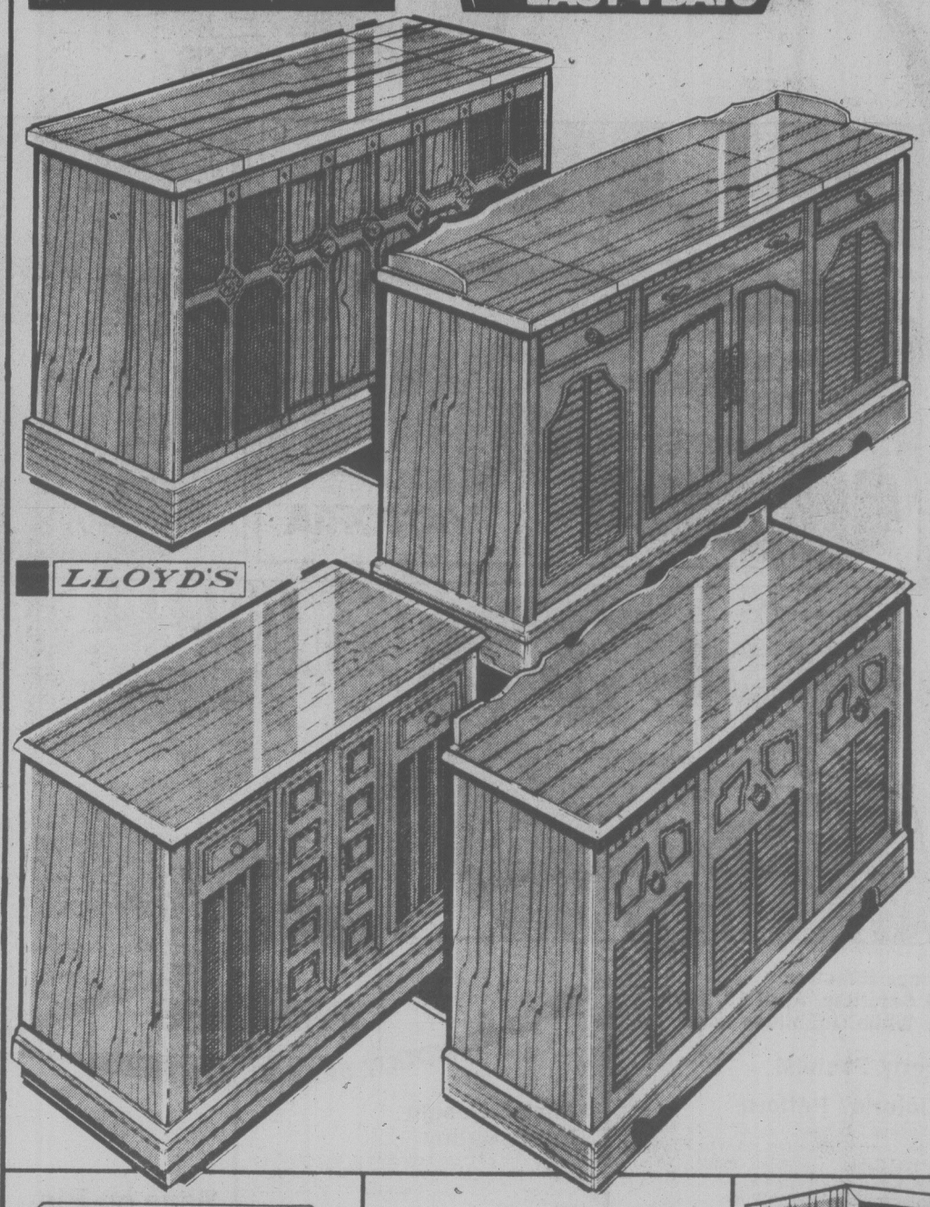

Site of the championships has yet to be decided. It will be either Salt Lake City, Edmonton or Calgary.

Schooling Opens Doors for Prisoners

STE. ANNE DES PLAINES, Que. (CP) — A convicted murderer who was president of the prisoners' committee during the riot and hostage-taking at British Columbia Penitentiary in September, 1976, now is taking third-year university courses by correspondence at Archambault Federal Penitentiary here.

Ivan Horvat, who was transferred to Archambault after the incident in British Columbia, is articulate and confident and has praise for the academic program at the Quebec prison.

"This school is the only place in prison where you feel some sort of accomplishment," he said recently. "You can work in the machine shop for 10 years but you can never qualify as a machinist. You can never get a piece of paper saying you have achieved something, whereas here you can at least get a college diploma.

Horvat said that "when you get out, it (education) is the difference between having the motivation to go straight, and going out and buying a .38 revolver and a box of shells."

The program was set up in 1971 by Dawson College, which was the first college to offer full-time, regular college courses within a Canadian prison. The program started in Leclerc medium-security institute and expanded two years later to Archambault.

Dawson College makes no claim to rehabilitating Archambault prisoners, 35 per cent of whom are serving life sentences.

"All we try to do is duplicate in prison the learning and teaching conditions of our downtown college," said Tony Swartz, co-ordinator of the prison program. "There is no doubt that the program helps inmates qualify for parole faster, but we are not in the business of reforming prison or rehabilitating the inmates.

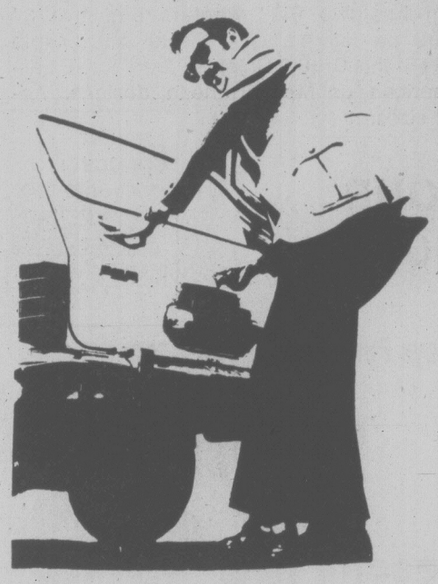

"We just give them the means, and if they want to use the courses to change the direction of their lives, that's fine with us."

Administrators and prisoners agree that guards often regard the school with suspicion and resentment.

"The system is organized so that we are dependent on the guards," said Jack McCann, 42, a prisoner. "The school robs them of this power. In it, we depend on ourselves. We no longer need them and they don't like it."

Swartz said the guards "don't want us to teach psychology because they think it will give the prisoners some sort of magical power which they will use against them."

FORMER LSD-GURU VISITS EMPRESS

Globe-trotting spiritual awareness teacher Ram Dass, who took LSD and other psychedelic drugs in collaboration with Timothy Leary, will speak at The Empress Sunday, April 23, at 8 p.m.

Formerly known as Richard Alpert, Ram Dass has served on the psychology faculties of Harvard, Stanford and the University of California.

He changed his name in 1967 when he went to India and studied yoga and meditation under Neem Karoli Baba, a holy man.

The Hanuman Foundation which sponsors projects designed to enhance the spiritual quality of life, particularly for prisoners and the terminally ill, was started by Ram Dass in 1973.

Proceeds from his lecture will go to the foundation.

Tickets are $4 at the door.

Caribou Herds Shrinking

BURNS LAKE (CP) — A University of Victoria professor says there are fewer than 13,000 caribou left in British Columbia.

Dr. Tom Bergerud, quoting results of a one-year study for the provincial fish and wildlife branch, said he believes bears and wolves are killing most of the caribou calves in northern B.C. within a month of the calves' births.

"I think there are no huntable caribou in the province and I am quite pessimistic about their future," he told a convention of the Western Guides and Outfitters Association.

Meanwhile, the fish and wildlife branch has asked permission to shoot wolves from aircraft to assist a study of caribou in the Horseranch Range, about 400 miles northwest of this central British Columbia community.

Bergerud said there were between 20,000 and 25,000 caribou in B.C. as recently as 1970, but now there are only 10,500-to 13,000.

Overhunting, as well as predators, has contributed to the decline, he said, explaining that the mortality rate of 10 per cent and the calf-survival rate of 10 per cent leaves no room for hunting the animals.

The survival rate, he said, is even lower in northern B.C. where there are more predators.

N.Z. Eyes Hanging for Drug Pushers

AUCKLAND (CP) — If any country is well protected against drug imports one would think it would be New Zealand, an isolated island country in the depth of the South Pacific.

Yet drug problems are so bad that demands are mounting for the death penalty for drug pushers.

The last hanging in New Zealand was more than 20 years ago, in 1957. Capital punishment was formally abolished in 1961 except for one crime, treason.

But despite its isolation, drug use is mounting in New Zealand. Some marijuana is grown locally despite police surveillance and frequent seizures of plants.

Marijuana and hard drugs are smuggled ashore from merchant vessels. Supplies also come ashore by cruise yachts.

Even the chairman of a government caucus committee on drugs recently acknowledged that use of drugs by school children was more prevalent than most parents dreamed.

John Kirk, an opposition Labor MP and son of a former Labor prime minister, has called for introduction of heavier penalties. He says it may be necessary to empower the police to tap telephones, and that the death penalty for drug trafficking might be necessary within five years.

The secretary of the Police Association, R. A. Moodie, said legislation and the courts are not tough enough in combatting drugs and that the penalty for trafficking in hard drugs should be death.

Several prominent National government MPs have supported the call for a death penalty for drug offences. They include the minister of police, A. McCready. "In some cases, the pedlars are worse than murderers," he said. "They kill numbers of people, not just one, and they do it for money."

The government has, however, stepped up its anti-drug activities. Two fast ocean-going customs launches have been approved for interception work, and the number of drug dogs used at ports and airports has been doubled.

Yet support for the introduction of capital punishment to fight the growth of the drug menace is increasing. There has been much acclaim for the latest statements by Kirk that the penalty must fit the crime. Drug pushing, he said, is "indiscriminate murder on a predetermined basis for great profit."

Custom Car Craze Undoes Henry's Work

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Henry Ford made one of the industrial innovations of the century by mass-producing identical cars. But today a new industry is dedicated to undoing Ford's work.

Catering to the new craze are thousands of car body and paint shops throughout North America.

Alain Clenet, owns one such factory at Santa Barbara, Calif.

His Clenets, selling at $39,500, recall the sleek styling and gleaming side-exhausts of the Duesenbergs of the days of Jean Harlow and Clark Gable.

The Clenet, a two-seater, is produced in a limited edition of 250. There is a four-month-long waiting list since production began in 1976.

Clenet says his cars are designed to reintroduce people to the romance of motoring.

"We wanted a car that looked tasteful and glamorous and sounded deep and beautiful. The senses are very important. First you see it, then you hear it and then you touch it and smell the leather upholstery."

Clenet competes in the connoisseurs' market with a wide range of expensive imported cars.

He divides these into what he calls the "conservatives" like the Rolls Royce and the "exotics" including the Stutz, Excalibur and Ferrari.

His next design will be a four-seater, Le Louvre, which will sell for $55,000.

In Hollywood a special industry has grown up producing bizarre cars for the film industry. The leader, George Barris, who calls himself the King of Customizers, built five Batmobiles for the Batman television series.

So keen is the demand for murals on the side of vans and motorcars that even well-established portrait painters have turned to this art form. Costs can run into the thousands.

Backlog Jams County Court

The backlog of trials and appeals to be heard in Victoria county court has grown so much that only 21 court days are left open this year.

Dates were set Tuesday for a number of jury and non-jury criminal matters which will use up 23 of the 44 days which had been available.

As dates began to be set in early November, Judge Leslie Cashman, presiding at call day when dates are fixed, observed at one point, "There are no days left between now and October."

When the remaining court dates are used up at the next call day in a month, anyone wishing a trial or appeal to be heard in county court can expect to wait until 1979.

With dates set for criminal jury trials at the next general sessions in May, five cases were adjourned until the next jury month, September. Eight cases in which the accused person or persons had chosen a jury trial were switched by the defence to judge alone.

At the afternoon session of call day, dealing only with non-jury criminal trials and appeals from provincial court decisions, Courtroom D was jammed with spectators, accused persons and at least 22 lawyers.

In an interview later, Regional Crown Counsel J.W. Anderson attributed the heavy volume of county court business to the general criminal volume and the availability of court time.

(County court usually has two judges. Sometimes this is increased to three, but sometimes it is only one. County court also handles a variety of civil matters, and county court judges frequently sit as local judges of supreme court hearing routine civil matters. County court does not sit for most of July or throughout August).

Asked if the backlog is serious to the administration of justice, Anderson said, "Some of these cases come to trial a year after the offence. How can you make a proper disposition a year after an offence? It is difficult to make an appropriate disposition a year later."

Provincial court, where all criminal cases begin and some are completed while others go to county or supreme court, is now booking cases into August.

No Tennis Bubble Unless it Pays

Saanich aldermen went on record Tuesday night as endorsing the proposal for an indoor tennis bubble only if it can be proved the centre's income will write off the capital cost in five years.

But after stressing no commitment had been made to proceed with the project — estimated to cost between $225,000 and $250,000 — the parks and recreation committee spent several minutes discussing where the bubble should be located.

Although Ald. John Mika said it should be built adjacent to the G.R. Pearkes Arena, Mayor Mel Couvelier and a majority of committee members favored the Cedar Hill Community Centre site.

The two other locations suggested were Gordon Head and the Royal Oak area. But Couvelier said the latter was ruled out automatically because the tennis centre should be built alongside an existing recreational facility which is open 16 to 20 hours a day, for staffing economy reasons.

He said Cedar Hill is the obvious choice because of its central location and the fact it serves the biggest concentration of population.

Mika said the Pearkes Arena site should be the top priority, to correct the present imbalance in the distribution of recreational facilities throughout the municipality.

"We have to start helping the western end (of Saanich) with facilities," he said. "I think they've had the short end of the stick for a long time."

But committee chairman Ald. Fred Severson said as aldermen were adamant that the bubble pay for itself, they should place it centrally in an area which assures the best guarantee of profitability.

"If we put it in the wrong place it could cost us; it could be a bust," he warned.

The designation of a tentative site is necessary, aldermen were told, because site preparation costs are an integral part of the tendering process.

The final decision whether to build the four-court tennis centre will not be made until staff have obtained bids and satisfied council as to the cost-liquidating prospects.

Recreation director Bill Young has estimated the bubble could net $70,000 a year.

In other business Tuesday night, the committee asked Young to prepare a report for its next meeting analysing the reasons for declining attendance and revenue at the Pearkes Arena, the Cedar Hill Community Centre and the Gordon Head Recreation Centre.

Young's report for the first quarter of 1978 showed the arena in the bleakest position, with public skating attendance for the January-March period down more than 50 per cent over the first quarter of 1977 (from 14,816 to 7,240 skaters).

Revenue from that source slumped from $9,233 to $4,313.

Couvelier said Young's assessment of the situation should include proposals for action to reverse the downward trend.

PEEK AND RUN ON PORN CURBS

Proposed controls over the display of pornographic magazines in stores was debated at a Saanich finance committee meeting Tuesday night.

But aldermen took a quick peek and shied away from the subject after Ald. John Mika challenged the proponents of controls to define what is pornographic and what is not.

The discussion arose from a resident's letter of complaint to Woolco department store, concerning the open shelf display of what the writer claimed were "pornographic magazines."

Ald. Ian Cass proposed that Saanich write to all stores asking them to keep such magazines out of the public view.

But Mika said merely because a magazine features a nude on the cover doesn't make it pornographic. He noted that the sale of pornographic material is against the law, and if anyone believes that law is being broken in Saanich "they had better have the courage to identify the offenders."

$88M PROFIT IN '77 BY PETRO-CANADA

OTTAWA (CP) — Petro-Canada, the national oil company, turned a profit of $88.7 million in 1977, its first full year of operation.

The company's annual report, tabled Tuesday in the Commons by Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie, said the profit came on sales of 10.2 million barrels of oil and 53.6 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

Gillespie said later he was pleased with the performance of the firm, which last year rated 10th among the country's oil companies in drilling for new supplies of oil and gas.

"And that came in the first full year of operations," the minister said. "Most of the first year was spent setting up the organization."

During the year, the company participated in drilling 13 of the 27 wells sunk in the frontier regions of the north and off the east coast.

The government set up the oil company in 1976 with the aim of supplementing the work of the private companies, especially in providing money for exploration in the high-risk frontier areas.

Nuclear-Earning Leap

OTTAWA (CP) — The federally-owned Eldorado Nuclear Ltd. more than doubled its earnings to $6.9 million in 1977, says the company annual report tabled Tuesday in the Commons.

The report shows an increase of 44 per cent to $68.6 million in total revenues to the firm from mining and refining uranium for use as a fuel in nuclear reactors.

During the year, the company said it increased its reserves of uranium ore by 20 per cent to 4.19 million tons.

Eldorado President Nick Ediger said exploration programs, which cost $4.5 million last year, are continuing.

Pension Boost Now: CLC

OTTAWA (CP) — The 2.3-million-member Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) said Tuesday increases in government pensions are urgently needed to alleviate what it termed the distressing financial plight of more than one million old age pensioners.

The CLC said in a brief to the Ontario royal commission on pensions that increases in the old age security pension, the guaranteed income supplement and the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) should be made to bring these pensioners above the poverty line.

The CLC said there was little time to be concerned about overhauling private pension systems because they "cannot be counted on to provide adequate retirement incomes to all Canadians."

It recommended an increase in the old age assistance, available to everyone over age 65 regardless of income, to $2,250 a year from the current $1,853. It said the amount paid to a married couple should remain the same at $3,750.

The CLC said the supplement, paid to those receiving old age assistance with little or no other income, should be increased to $3,375 a year from the current $1,291 for a single person. It said the supplement for a couple should be increased to $5,250 from $2,293.

In addition, the CLC urged a gradual increase in benefits paid by the CPP beginning in 1980 and an increase each year until 1986 when the pension would pay double the benefits it now pays. Maximum CPP benefits now are about $194 a month.

The congress presented figures to the commission showing 57 per cent of single persons between ages 65 and 69 had incomes of less than $4,000 in 1975.

More than a quarter of families where the head of the household was between age 65 and 69 had incomes of less than $6,000.

In 1975, the poverty line, as defined by the Senate committee on poverty, was $3,861 for a single person and $6,435 for a couple.

"The picture that emerges is distressing," the CLC said in its brief.

Ban 'Unfair'

OTTAWA (CP)—A Liberal MP urged the federal government Tuesday to reconsider its ban on saccharin because of hardships it will impose on people living in rural areas and isolated sections of the North.

Maurice Foster (Algoma) told the Commons the plan to ban sale of saccharin in grocery stores and permit its sale by prescription only in drug stores will be unfair to those in rural and remote areas who cannot easily get to pharmacies.

He said people on low-calorie diets and diabetics will be especially hard hit.

Foster said the health department should await the outcome of a $1.4 million U.S. study on the effect of saccharin on laboratory animals and humans before going ahead with the ban.

PROPOSALS TO AID FILM INDUSTRY

OTTAWA (CP) — Secretary of State John Roberts Tuesday unveiled several proposals to aid the country's shaky film industry, among them the addition of $1 million to the Crown agency that finances feature films made in Canada.

The Canadian Film Development Corp. also now will be able to finance production of feature films which get their first showing on television, the minister told the Commons committee on the arts.

Roberts said the aim was to bolster the ailing Canadian film industry but these and other plans were criticized immediately by David MacDonald, the Progressive Conservative culture spokesman, and by the Council of Canadian Filmmakers.

Three Judges Named in B.C.

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford announced today three appointments to the courts of British Columbia, one to the Court of Appeal, one to the Superior Court and one to the County Court. They are:

Mr. Justice John S. Aikins, 64, a judge of the Supreme Court of British Columbia since 1962, a judge of the Court of Appeal of British Columbia effective June 1, 1978.

Judge Aikins will fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Mr. Justice A.E. Branca last month. Judge Aikins was admitted to the bar in 1937.

Howard A. Callaghan, 51, a Penticton lawyer, appointed a judge of the Supreme Court of British Columbia. Judge Callaghan will fill the vacancy created by the death of Mr. Justice W.A. Schultz last month.

Admitted to the bar in 1954, Judge Callaghan was a member of the Penticton law firm of Callaghan and Gilchrist.

Stephen J. Hardinge, 51, of Vancouver, appointed judge of the County Court of Cariboo where he will replace Judge W.D. Ferry who elected to become a supernumerary judge this month.

Judge Hardinge, who has been director of the justice department's Vancouver regional office since 1975, was admitted to the Bar of B.C. in 1952. He was later admitted to the Bars of the Yukon Territory (1967) and the Northwest Territory (1971).

Prior to his appointment in 1969 with the justice department, Judge Hardinge served as assistant deputy judge advocate with the army, litigation solicitor with British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority and from 1962 until 1969 engaged in private practice.

MDs URGED FOR AGED

OTTAWA (CP) — Medical schools should pay more attention to training doctors to specialize in care of the aged, said Phillip Rynard (PC—Simcoe North) Tuesday in the Commons.

Rynard, a medical doctor, said there are only 27 geriatric specialists in the country and there should be a minimum of 450. He compared this with Canada's supply of pediatricians, estimated at between 800 and 900.

NDP ATTACKS BUDGET 'LEAK'

OTTAWA (CP) — Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party Leader, called Tuesday for an inquiry into what he said was a leak of budget details, saying such a leak could have led to windfall profits for somebody.

Imperial Oil stocks went up Tuesday morning and the budget announcement Monday night contained increased allowances for oil producers. Broadbent said it is possible the allowances were known before the announcement since other budget details became public prematurely in the press.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien rejected the allegation, saying the stocks did not go up until after the budget was announced.

Northern Pipeline Bill Clears Senate

OTTAWA (CP)—Legislation authorizing construction of a northern natural gas pipeline was given third and final reading in the Senate Tuesday and needed only royal assent to become law.

Senator Ray Perrault, government leader in the Senate, said royal assent could come today.

A Conservative attempt to amend the bill to strengthen protection of native rights was defeated and the bill received unanimous approval in the upper chamber.

The bill provides for construction of a $10 billion pipeline to carry American natural gas from Alaska through Canada to markets in the United States. Construction is to begin in 1981. It also provides for construction of a spur line to the Mackenzie Delta to carry Canadian gas in time.

The bill was amended in the Commons at opposition insistence to include a statement that native claims on land traversed by the pipeline would not be prejudiced by construction of the pipeline.

Senator Jacques Flynn, Senate opposition leader, said this amendment could restrict native rights and is worse than omitting reference to native claims altogether. He was supported by others.

He said the amendment refers only to "the land on which the pipeline is situated and not to areas that may be miles away, but will, nevertheless, be affected by the pipeline."

He wanted to amend the bill to protect native land claims on any land affected by the pipeline.

"The Senate has no higher duty and can perform no finer task than to do everything possible to protect the rights of the native peoples of this country," Senator Eugene Forsey (L—Ontario) said in support of Senator Flynn's motion.

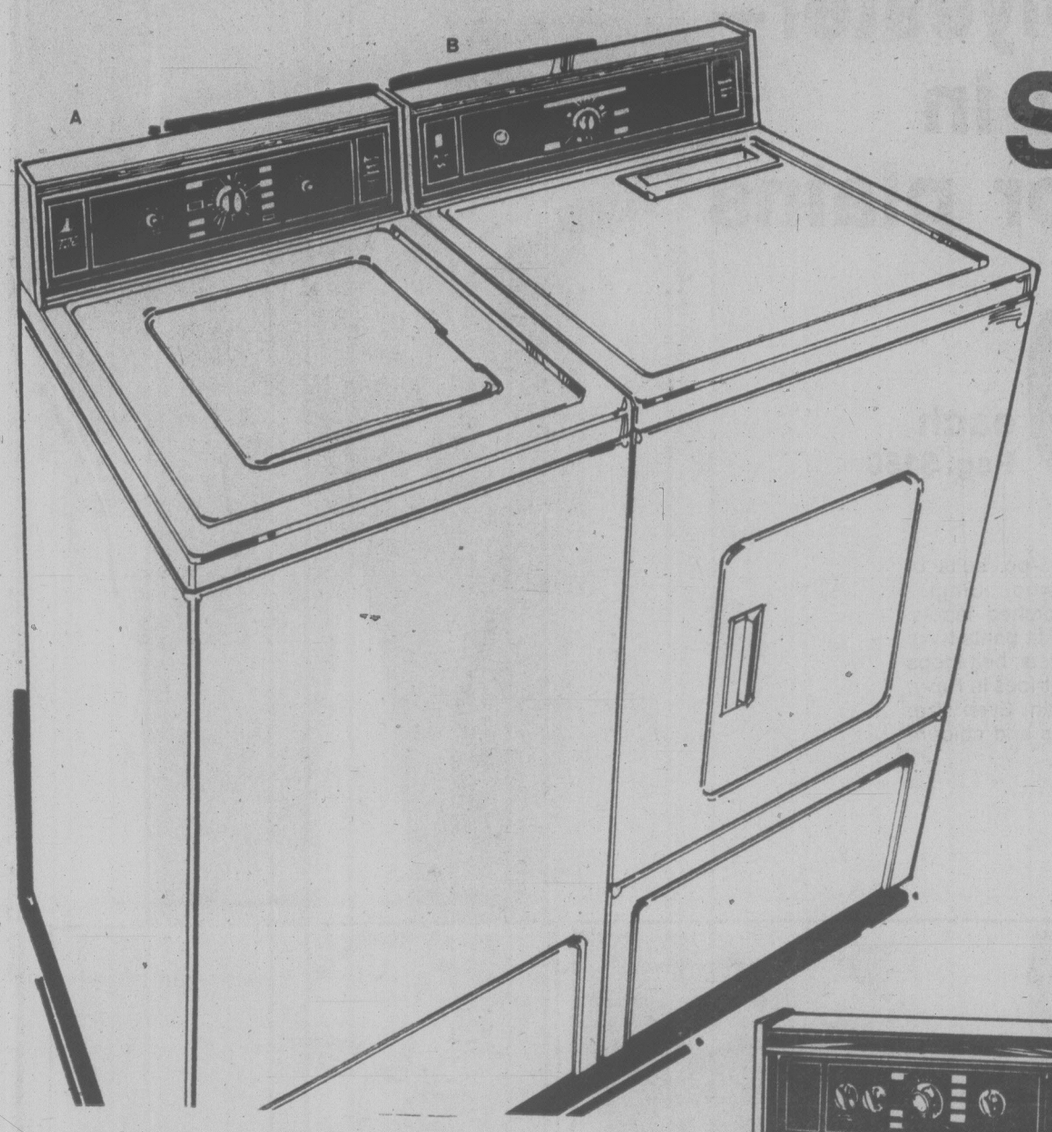

The amendment was defeated in a rare recorded vote 38 to 18, some Liberals supporting the Conservatives.

Perrault promised that the detailed terms and conditions governing construction of the pipeline will be completed within 30 days.

He said they will be submitted to all provincial and local governments, native organizations and "other public groups which have a particular interest in the project" for their comments. "This is a commitment which I want to give on behalf of the government," he said.

MARIJUANA USE IN FORCES UP

OTTAWA (CP) — Marijuana is being used increasingly by young servicemen in the armed forces, Lt.-Gen. J. C. Smith said Tuesday.

Smith, assistant deputy defence minister, told a Commons defence committee meeting "there tends to be a correlation between the very new recruits just out of high school and the incidence of use of marijuana."

While marijuana use is increasing, so-called hard drugs are not being used much in the armed forces, he said. Heroin, cocaine, LSD and opium are widely considered to be hard drugs.

The alcohol problem is more serious, he said. The forces had rehabilitation programs for alcoholics in several centres across Canada.

8 Auto Firms OK Rust Code

OTTAWA (CP) - Eight automobile companies have indicated they will comply with an anti-corrosion code that requires 1978 models to last for at least three years without serious rusting, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said Tuesday.

The firms are Chrysler of Canada Ltd., Fiat, Honda, Mercedez-Benz, Ford Motor Co. of Canada, Volkswagen, Porsche and Datsun.

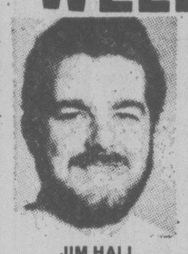

Allmand told a parliamentary committee on social affairs he had written to the firms before Christmas asking for voluntary compliance with the code approved Jan. 19 by federal and provincial consumer affairs ministers.

He said a firm but polite request was sent earlier this week to another large company as a reminder that other firms of the same size had already responded favorably to the code. Allmand did not name the company.

"It is the government's policy to intervene in private industry as little as possible," he said, "But firms producing cars which rust easily and don't go along with the code will suffer in the marketplace anyway.

Arms Cost Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat Stuart Leggatt attacked the government Tuesday for a "massive leap into military hardware at a time of growing economic crisis in Canada."

Leggatt, MP for New Westminster, told a Commons defence committee meeting the defence budget has risen to $4.1 billion this year from $2.9 billion in 1975-76 while the government has been preaching restraint in other areas.

But Progressive Conservative Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre) later rapped Leggatt for talking about restraining military spending while the Soviet Union was building up its armed forces.

Leggatt said the government could do little except "play around with provincial sales taxes." But it could find money to buy military equipment.

C.R.Nixon, deputy defence minister, said the government pledged two years ago to increase spending on new equipment by 12 per cent a year, excluding inflation.

Conservative defence critic Allan McKinnon (Victoria) has criticized the government for not living up to this promise this year.

RCMP Violations Kept from Brass

OTTAWA (CP) — A senior RCMP officer testified Tuesday that he violated policy in allowing wiretaps and he withheld this information from superiors.

What's more, Assistant Commissioner T. S. Venner told a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing, he would do it again "in the public interest."

Venner's testimony was similar in nature to that of other RCMP officers.

Assistant Commissioner Murray Sexsmith, in charge of RCMP security service operations, has told the commission he felt Solicitor-General Francis Fox was technically correct last June in saying an RCMP break into a Montreal news agency office was an isolated case of RCMP law-breaking.

Sexsmith had been asked why he didn't set Fox straight when he knew the minister was off-base.

Chief Supt. Donald Cobb has testified he drafted a fake message urging terrorists to violence late in 1971.

RCMP and everyone else apparently believed the message was genuine. Cobb didn't set them straight. He justified it on the basis of national security.

The one thing testimony by Venner, Cobb, Sexsmith and others had has in common is that they not only tolerated illegal RCMP investigative activity, they also stood silently by while superior officers and politicians denied it was taking place.

Venner, for instance, acknowledged that while he was covering up the fact that his junior officers in Toronto were using wiretaps in drug, customs and other investigations in 1973, Parliament was being told that wiretaps weren't being used in such investigations.

Venner justified his action as being in the public interest. He regarded the policy as a guide to be followed when practical.

Blais Denies RCMP Leak

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has not leaked confidential criminal records to department stores and private security firms, Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais told the Commons Tuesday.

He was replying to questions by MP Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminister) based on newspaper articles last month. They said certain security firms were selling confidential information from RCMP computers to department store security personnel.

Cossitt Charge Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — A Carleton University professor denied a MP's claim Tuesday that he turned over to the Soviet Union a sophisticated laser device against the wishes of the RCMP's security service.

Progressive Conservative MP Tom Cossitt made the charge, and said the professor is continuing to receive grants for laser research from the National Research Council.

Cossitt said the sophisticated scientific device was delivered to Moscow in 1973 by Professor Johannes Koningstein, an Ottawa resident, against a specific request not to do so from the RCMP and the research council.

The professor said in an interview he was never told he should not have co-operated with the Soviet scientists.

Koningstein said the laser involved was a seven-year-old outdated device that was operating on only 10 per cent of its power.

"I took the laser through customs and was de-briefed by the RCMP when I returned from Moscow," he said.

Whales Still Trapped

SPRINGDALE, Nfld. (CP) — Four whales remain inside an ice-bordered cove at Hall's Bay in northeastern Newfoundland despite efforts by an icebreaker to cut a path for them to freedom and the open sea.

Residents say the three humpbacks and a narwhal were seen Tuesday afternoon in the area in which they have been trapped since early winter.

Cyril Pelley, a Springdale businessman who has been feeding the whales all winter, said Tuesday night a west wind is needed to get the ice out of the bay. The wind was blowing east Tuesday.

He said the whales are afraid to leave until all the ice drifts out. Pelley said the weather is mild, so it should be only a few days.

He said the channel cut by the icebreaker has filled up with loose broken ice.

Pelley said the whales seem to know him and other local people who have been trying to help them. The whales came toward them when they approached, and followed their boat into the channel.

Pelley expressed concern about the narwhal because he was unsure whether it was taking food.

MPs Look at Boundary Row

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of Parliament got their first inside look Tuesday at what progress special negotiators have made in resolving disputed maritime boundaries with the United States.

They were also told a 1978 interim fisheries agreement between the countries, recommended by the negotiators, will be signed in a few days.

Lorne Clark, deputy Canadian negotiator, told the Commons fisheries committee that Canada "is prepared to make only minimal changes" to its claim for Georges Bank off the East Coast and wants the boundary line off the Strait of Juan de Fuca moved southward several miles and is not yet satisfied with U.S. proposals for Dixon Entrance.

Clark said the U.S. proposed a settlement for the Dixon Entrance area between British Columbia and the Alaskan Panhandle which would increase American waters by about 100 square miles inside the entrance. But in return, Canada would get about 9,000 square miles outside the zone.

The negotiators, Marcel Cadieux for Canada and Lloyd Cutler for the U.S., are expected to resume their talks in the summer after twice passing government-imposed deadlines for an agreement.

They said in a joint report to governments that they had made sufficient progress to expect a negotiated settlement by the end of the year.

Clark said Canada has been trying to get the U.S. to accept equidistance from coastlines as the main point for drawing boundary lines. The U.S. has "accepted equidistance when it is to its advantage and special circumstances when that is advantageous."

Canada gained several important concessions from the U.S. in the interim fisheries agreement after feeling it came out on the short end of the 1977 accord. One change is that one country can take reciprocal action against the othrr if it considers traditional fisheries were infringed upon by regulations of the other.

ANOTHER LAYER

OTTAWA (CP) — Vancouver Liberal Simma Holt said today Parliament appears to have another layer of bureaucracy with every law it passes.

She made the comment after being told in the Commons justice committee that a considerable amount of time now has to be spent in the National Parole Board reviewing requests from prisoners who want to see their files.

Under human rights legislation approved by Parliament, persons can have access to government files on themselves.

W.R. Outerbridge, chairman of the parole office, said an average of 10 requests daily have been received from prisoners since the law went into effect last month.

Buckerfield's LIMITED

To Fertilize...

That's one question B.C. gardeners are now facing. Is it easier to cut the grass twice a week or just not bother fertilizing your lawn this year and avoid looking at how brown it's getting?

Buckerfield's answer is Uplands Special Fertilizer, an organic and chemical blend that takes all that extra trouble and work out of caring for your lawn. The organic ingredients provide slow release nitrogen for greener growth, and the chemical portion provides phosphates and potash for sturdy leaf growth and vigorous root activity, as well as quick nitrogen for immediate greening.

This means that Uplands Special Fertilizer will give quick green growth, but not so fast that you will be cutting your grass twice a week, and slow green growth over a longer period of time, which means you won't need to fertilize as often to keep your lawn looking well fed.

Uplands Special Fertilizer . . . your solution to the question of whether to fertilize or not to fertilize your lawn this year!

Major Equality Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — Edgar Gallant, chairman of the Public Service Commission, has been urged to accept nothing less than "a major upgrading of government efforts to ensure equal opportunities for men and women in the public service of Canada."

The advice comes from David MacDonald, Progressive Conservative spokesman on women's rights, in a letter to Gallant saying there has been a steady erosion of opportunities for advancement among female public servants.

The letter was dated April 5 and released this week.

The MP for Egmont was responding to a paper Gallant published last month containing replies to allegations made by an anonymous group of female public servants in a brief MacDonald issued.

The brief said women are stuck at the lower levels of the public service, are the victims of chauvinistic male managers and not given the same chances as men for promotions to senior ranks.

MacDonald said arguments Gallant used in his paper to defend the public service commission's record on equality "reinforce the negative feelings expressed by the authors of the brief."

Among MacDonald's major criticisms was the fact that the commission's office of equal opportunities has only 12 man-years to service about 94,000 female public servants. A man-year is the equivalent of one employee working for one year.

In addition, only 16 of 40 government departments had full-time equal opportunity co-ordinators and the others had simply tacked the job on to other employees as a secondary responsibility.

Some of the co-ordinators probably devote less than one-quarter of their time to providing information and counselling the thousands of women in their department, MacDonald said. Only 30 per cent of them participated in inter-departmental equal opportunities committees.

"The potential is too great for co-ordinators to become discouraged, frustrated and disinterested for lack of time," he said.

BROADMEAD
SYNOPSIS
The tiled Porte Cochere Entrance protects you from the elements as you leave your automobile and enter through the custom door into the foyer. The afternoon sun filters through the skylight in the cathedral ceiling of the living rm., casting a soft shadow into the conversation pit. After the family meal in the formal dining room, the children play in the activity rm., while you ascend to the second floor library adjacent to the master bedroom for a quiet evening of reading. Before retiring, you decide to relax in the master bathroom; the large Jacuzzi Romantic Marble Bathtub puts you in the right relaxing mood for a restful sleep.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc. for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday: 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate

Police Battle Abductors, Free Italian Millionaire

ROME (Reuter) — Angelo Apolloni, a kidnapped Italian building millionaire, was freed Tuesday night after a gunbattle between police and his abductors, police said today.

He was shot in the shoulder when police intercepted the kidnappers' car as they were transferring him to another hideout. The kidnappers escaped on foot and are still at large.

Apolloni, 32, was the second kidnap victim freed by Rome police Tuesday. Earlier, they stormed a hideout to rescue 16-year-old Michela Marconi, daughter of a wealthy industrialist.

Police believe both victims, abducted last month, were held by the same gang.

The police got their break when they caught two of the girl's kidnappers in an ambush on Monday night just after they had picked up a ransom of $317,000.

The two men were shot and wounded and are recovering in a hospital.

Police said the kidnap gang feared another raid and decided to transfer Apolloni to a safe hideout.

But police were preapred and stopped the gangsters as they drove off with Apolloni lying handcuffed in the trunk of their car.

"I can't believe it," Apollini said as he embraced police. "I am free."

The builder looked to be in good health but was missing one of his fingertips, cut off by the kidnappers and sent to the family with a demand for ransom.

Moro Doused By Drugs?

ROME (AP) — A leading Italian neurologist says former premier Aldo Moro's Red Bridgade kidnappers are probably dosing him with psychic drugs.

Prof. Alessandro Agnoli said in an interview he based his conclusion on changes in the handwriting of the 61-year-old president of the governing Christian Democratic party.

Agnoli said he compared Moro's handwriting in letters he wrote before the Red Brigades abducted him March 16 and the two letters and an eight-page statement by him released by his terrorist captors.

Moro's handwritten letters from captivity, which the government says are authentic, appealed for the release of jailed terrorists to ransom him.

Four Held in Murder

ANTWERP (AP) — Four men have been arrested in connection with the kidnap-murder of Baron Charles-Victor Bracht, police said today.

The police said the four men have been taken into custody for questioning and have not yet been charged. They said one of the four lived in Schoten, the Antwerp suburb in which the Bracht family's chateau is located.

The other three men also are from the Antwerp area, police sources said.

Bracht was killed by a pistol shot in the head while resisting his kidnappers who "nevertheless took the body away and on the same day started negotiating an exchange for a ransom," the baron's son said today.

UN Peace Troops Hammer at Snipers

BEIRUT (AP) — Arab League peacekeepers fired tank cannon and rockets at Moslem and Christian snipers today in a bid to crush four days of sectarian clashes in adjacent slums in southeastern Beirut.

Police in the capital said 21 persons were killed and more than 90 wounded in the clashes by dawn today. All but 47 of the wounded were discharged from hospitals.

The peacekeeping command said two Syrian and two Sudanese soldiers were wounded trying to halt fighting Tuesday between gunmen in the Christian Ein Rummaneh district and the Moslem neighborhood of Chiyah.

Reports received by telephone from residents near to the battle zone said volleys of rockets slammed into numerous apartment buildings suspected of serving as sniper posts on both sides of the dividing line between Ein Rummaneh and Chiyah.

Meanwhile, in Jerusalem, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said the Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon was a qualified military and political success.

Begin told parliament's foreign affairs and security committee on Tuesday the establishment of a UN peacekeeping force on Israel's northern border was a political achievement, but the long-range effectivness of the arrangement is still in doubt.

Begin said he was satisfied the peacekeepers, who are replacing the Israelis in the south, "mean business."

Israeli officials had expressed concern UN troops would be unable to stop the guerrillas from returning to southern Lebanon as Israeli forces withdrew.

Israeli troops began a limited pullback Tuesday along the northeastern fringe of the zone they occupied and turned nine posts over to Norwegian UN units. Another small pullback is scheduled Friday in the central sector along the Litani River, 30 kilometres north of the Israeli border.

House Cost Up in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of a new house rose by the largest amount in more than four years last fall, the U.S. commerce department said Monday. The average new house, ranging from the cheapest to the most expensive, cost $57,500, an increase of 6.5 per cent over the third quarter, the department said. For all of 1977, housing costs were up 12.5 per cent for an average price of $54,000.

Carter Curbs 'Silly'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's new anti-inflation campaign, pegged to another call for voluntary wage-price restraint, aroused little enthusiasm today — and some jeers from the people he asked to set an example.

"Silly symbolism," said Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

With inflation threatening to increase again, Carter said the administration will take the lead in voluntary restraint by seeking to hold the next round of wage increases for federal workers to 5.5 per cent in October.

Carter also said he will freeze executive salaries in the government, veto inflationary legislation, reduce government regulations that add to industrial costs, act to hold down the price of lumber in housing construction, push legislation to contain hospital-care costs, and take administrative action if necessary to curb oil imports.

But in a speech before the American Society of Newspaper Editors and at a follow-up news conference, the president warned that it is a myth that the government alone — by this and other measures — can halt inflation.

"Let me be blunt about this point," he said. "I am asking American workers to follow the example of federal workers and accept a lower rate of wage increase.

His goal, announced previously in his economic message in January, is for industry and labor to hold price, wage and salary increases "significantly below" the average rate of 1976-77.

Carter's prescription for combating inflation, running at an annual rate of 8.4 per cent in the United States so far this year, drew fire from union leaders of the federal workers he suggested should lead the battle.

"It is simply incredulous that again, federal employees are to be made the scapegoat," said the National Federation of Federal Employees.

Kenneth Blaylock, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, said Carter has "failed the entire labor movement and America's workers because his program is nothing more than a symbolic gesture against inflation."

The president's statement opposing wage-price controls, short of "a national emergency like all-out war," was greeted warmly by the chairman of General Motors and other business executives.

But others were lukewarm at best about the rest of Carter's anti-inflation program.

David Moffitt, a spokesman for Continental Oil Co., said his firm will not comment because "there was nothing new enough to inspire reaction."

GYPSIES DEMAND CASH

GENEVA (AP) — An international conference of gypsies, claiming the Nazis killed 500,000 of their ancestors in the Second World War, demanded Tuesday that West Germany make reparations.

The 100 delegates from 22 countries at the second World Romani Congress did not say how much money they wanted, but said it would go to improve education for gypsy children in Western Europe.

The gypsies said the fund would be administered by India, the country to which gypsies trace their origin and which expressed strong support for their cause.

The delegates also agreed to seek consultative status at the United Nations and to ask for access to UN human rights meetings.

The congress is part of a campaign by leaders of the world's estimated 10 million gypsies—250,000 of whom live in the United States—to gain international recognition without sacrificing their culture. Its first meeting was in London in 1971.

Actor Yul Brynner, honorary president of the congress, said the next meeting would be in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, in 1984. Brynner was brought up by his gypsy grandmother after his mother died in childbirth. He flew from New York to close the meeting Tuesday.

Cambodia Attacked

BANGKOK (AP) — Vietnam has launched division-sized attacks on Cambodia all along the frontier between the two Communist countries, Cambodia's Phnom Penh radio claims.

Cambodia and Vietnam have been territorial rivals for centuries, and border fighting erupted soon after Communist forces in both countries defeated U.S.-backed governments in 1975.

The Phnom Penh broadcast, monitored here today, said several divisions of Vietnamese troops supported by aircraft, artillery and tanks, launched the attacks into Cambodia beginning April 7.

It is reported that a Vietnamese division has 8,000-10,000 men.

In Cambodia's southeastern Kampot Province, the broadcast said, a division of Vietnamese troops attacked and the battle lasted several hours. It said the Vietnamese suffered 200 killed and many wounded.

In a fight in eastern Prey Veng Province, Radio Phnom Penh said one Vietnamese aircraft was shot down and more than 100 invaders were killed while others "fled back to their land in shame."

The report said Cambodian troops also battled two regiments of Vietnamese west of Vietnam's Tay Ninh City.

Coffee Growers Dig In

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Eight Latin American coffee producers voted unanimously Monday to continue a boycott of the world coffee market in an attempt to force up prices.

Representatives of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, the Dominican Republic and Venezuala took part in the vote on the first day of a two-day meeting to study world market conditions and crop projections for the type of coffee known as "other milds," which is used mostly for blending.

The countries involved produce 80 percent of the total world output of "other milds."

The delegates also voted to halt negotiations with coffee merchants until prices go up. Many representatives contend that international prices are so low that producers cannot make a profit.

1.1% JUMP IN MARCH

Food, Fuel Push Inflation Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices rose in March by a substantial 1.1 per cent, the largest one-month advance since July, 1975, Statistics Canada reported today.

The 12-month inflation rate was 8.8 per cent, compared with 8.7 per cent in February.

The Consumer Price Index (CPI) last month hit 170.8 compared with 168.9 for February and 157.0 in March last year. The index is based on 1971 prices equalling 100.

Higher food, gasoline and fuel oil prices led the way in the over-all price hike.

The food price index, at 197.0 in March, was nearly double the 1971 base of 100.

The consumer price figures were released two days before the government is to start phasing out wage-and-price controls, imposed Oct. 14, 1975, and a day after release of statistics showing a record 1,045,000 unemployed during March.

Opposition spokesmen denounced the government after release of the figures. They said inflation will hurt low-income persons most.

James McGrath, Conservative social affairs critic, said assistance should be offered to those least able to defend themselves. He called on the government to reinstate a planned elimination of the subsidy on powdered milk, asked that more attention be given pensioners and said workers must not be forced through controls to accept pay raises less than the increase in the cost of living.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, said the current inflation will be devastating for those in the low-income levels. Workers earning $10,000 to $11,000 a year will see their earnings lose about $700 in purchasing power in 1978, he said.

Broadbent said no one can take Finance Minister Jean Chretien seriously any longer. The seven-per-cent rate for 1978 predicted in Monday's budget has already been proven wrong, he said.

Food prices, including higher costs for fresh fruit and vegetables, beef and pork products, were largely responsible for the increase. Food accounted for one-third of the over-all rise.

Higher prices for gasoline and home-heating fuel oil, put into effect by increases in the wellhead price, accounted for another one-quarter of the rise.

Costs of food alone rose by 1.4 per cent, while the rise for all items excluding food was 1.1 per cent.

Prices of food consumed at home, the main engine of inflation in recent months, were 1.6 per cent higher in March than in February and 16.1 per cent above a year ago.

Fresh fruit prices in March were 6.6 per cent higher than a month earlier and 33.6 per cent above levels of March, 1977. Part of the increase is accounted for by devaluation of the dollar, which has made all imported goods more costly.

Beef prices were 1.7 per cent higher in March than in February and up 32.3 per cent from depressed levels of a year ago.

The cost to consumers of fuels and utilities rose by 3.3 per cent in March from February. Over the year, prices in that sector jumped 13.3 per cent.

Dollar Keeps Sliding

The Canadian dollar dropped to a new 45-year-low of 87.2 cents U.S. on New York money markets today as the market continued to show a generally negative reaction to Finance Minister Jean Chretien's budget speech.

The U.S. dollar also dropped slightly on all West European money markets in early trading, reflecting general disappointment over President Carter's speech on the fight against inflation.

One London dealer said it was a "fairly strongly worded speech," but "nothing much has happened; people are pretty disappointed."

Juvenile Jailings In Limbo

The provincial government's multi-million dollar jails-for-juveniles program is in limbo because of a B.C. Supreme Court ruling.

In a decision last week, Justice D.E. Andrews ruled the government exceeded its jurisdiction in passing legislation that resulted in the establishment of a program to contain hard-core juvenile offenders in a jail-like setting.

The province has sought to have the ruling overturned in the B.C. Court of Appeals.

In the legislature Tuesday, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said 42 juveniles now being held in custody on the program will be returned to the courts for resentencing.

He said Crown prosecutors have been instructed to ask the judges to return the juveniles to the centres as a condition of probation.

Under the Juvenile Deliquency Act, judges can order juveniles to be kept in custody only in cases of remand, when they are awaiting sentence, or if convicted of a crime, as a condition of probation.

Justice Andrews' ruling has forced corrections officials to search for alternative methods in handling juveniles convicted of serious crimes.

The containment program, passed last year as an amendment to the Corrections Act, calls for five centres around the province, each capable of holding 30 inmate-residents.

Only two have been opened, one at Willingdon in Burnaby, the other at Centre Creek, near Chilliwack.

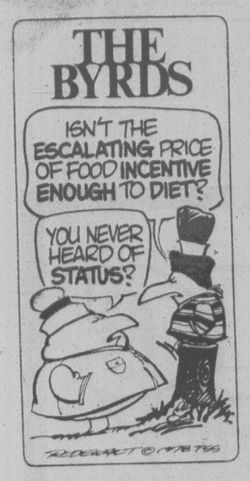

The Lakeview centre, located north of Campbell River, was to have opened Saturday. Eight juveniles were to have been tansferred to it from mainland centres on Monday.

Bill Jack, head of provincial corrections on the Island, said in an interview the camp will not now open as planned — at least not as a containment centre — despite the fact 25 persons have already been hired to run it.

He said he'll meet with his staff Thursday to try to come up with some other use for the facility which has just undergone $400,000 in renovations in preparation for the containment program.

One option is to start an attendance program at Lakeview similar to the one in

Quebec Delays Tax Cut

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's dignity is worth three days of uncertainty in business circles, Premier Rene Levesque said Tuesday, announcing that his government has delayed a decision on possible sales tax cuts until later this week.

Levesque accused federal Finance Minister Jean Chretien of a "shameless rape" of provincial taxing powers with his announcement in Monday's budget that Ottawa will defray the cost if provinces cut their sales taxes for the next six months.

"If Quebec has to accept this like a sleeping dog, the government would be entering the antechamber of true prostitution," the premier told the national assembly in reply to a question from opposition leader Gerard-D. Levesque.

The opposition leader called on the government to decide immediately whether it will fall into line with the other provinces which have agreed to accept the federal plan and drop their sales taxes up to three percentage points.

Quebec's delay is only creating more uncertainty in commercial circles, the Liberal leader said.

HORROR TALE FOR RETIREES

OTTAWA (CP) — A quart of milk for $2.45; rib roast at $4.55 a pound and an average one-bedroom apartment for $815 a month.

Those will be prices in 20 years with seven-per-cent annual inflation, the Ontario royal commission on pensions was told Tuesday. The figures were used by a pensioners' advisory group to demonstrate what it says is the need to increase all pensions to protect purchasing power.

The Council on Aging of Ottawa-Carleton was appearing at the first of three days of Ottawa hearings by the commission. The commission is touring the province listening to ideas on how to provide adequate income in retirement.

"We are in favor of full escalation of all pensions to keep them in line with the cost of living," the council said in its brief.

Swans Before Humans?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ljuben Jordon Stanenov, 35, of Vancouver, charged with stealing a $300 swan from the city's Stanley Park, said Monday in provincial court that he couldn't understand why birds were treated better than humans.

Stanenov, found guilty by Judge Allen Cliffe of theft over $200 and possession of stolen property, told the court that he killed the European male Mute swan March 16 because his welfare payments did not cover his food costs.

Stanenov said he earned $175 a month on welfare at the time and was paying $120 a month for rent. The money left over was not enough to buy food for a month, he said.

Stanenov was charged after witnesses in the park saw a man grab a swan, slit its throat with a pocket knife and stuff it into a blue plastic bag.

Who Should Play God?

Babies Under Glass

By TED HOWARD and JEREMY RIFKIN

(Fourth of nine parts)

"The womb is a dark and dangerous place, a hazardous environment," says Joseph Fletcher, professor of medical ethics at the University of Virginia School of Medicine. "We should want our potential children to be where they can be watched and protected as much as possible."

Not so very long ago, the womb was a private space. Now things are different. Today, the developing fetus can be observed by microphone, electromicroscopes, infrared thermography, X-ray, ultrasonics, radio-opaque dyes and even by insertion of a miniature camera that will send out motion pictures of the growing life to an eager public.

The late French Nobel Prize-winning biologist, Jean Rostand, has often said that he believed the creation of the artificial womb to be "inevitable." In a grand understatement, he acknowledged that such an advent would result "in a more or less profound modification of the human being in the course of formation." Until that glorious day arrived, Rostand suggested "an intermediary solution of the problem."

"Delivery," he forecast, "could be stimulated artificially and the embroy placed in culture at the age of two or three months; in short, a woman could reproduce like a kangaroo."

Baby-in-a-pouch notwithstanding, most researchers in the test-tube baby field are concentrating their efforts on the development of a complete artificial womb.

Dr. Yu-Chih Hsu of Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health has succeeded in growing a mouse embryo in vitro through approximately half its gestation period. Test-tube experiments have shown the potential for human fetal development in vitro.

Dr. E. S. E. Hafez, the Washington State University biologist who specializes in flushing superembroyos from pregnant sheep and cattle and shipping them half-way around the world, is certain that the day of complete test-tube life is nearer than most of us suspect.

Probe Nearly Complete

The major portion of the RCMP investigation into the Jack Davis affair has been completed.

Associate deputy attorney-general Neil McDiarmid said today the material has been turned over to the Crown counsel's office in Vancouver to determine whether charges will be laid.

Davis admitted in the legislature he had used refunds for first class tickets to offset other expenses he had not claimed while on government business.

Meanwhile, the head of the RCMP in B.C. denied today members of the force took part in any raid on Davis' office.

Deputy Commissioner Peter Bazowski repudiated allegations made last week that RCMP officers had searched the former cabinet minister's office and seized certain files and possessions.

"No search was made by any of our members," Bazowski said. "If we had even contempated such a move you can rest assured we'd have gone through the proper, legal channels."

Gordon Dowding, former speaker of the legislature, accused the RCMP of carrying out the search and said it constituted a serious breach of parliamentary privilege.

Court Told of Suicide Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court jury was told Tuesday that a suspect in the murders of four teen-agers discussed with a cellmate a number of bizarre ways of killing himself.

Constable Carl Harmes was testifying at the trial of Walter Murray Madsen, 24, charged with first-degree murder in the rifle slayings last July 18 in the Fraser Valley community of Rosedale.

Harmes was placed in the Chilliwack police cells with Madsen Aug. 31. Madsen did not know his cellmate was a police officer.

The constable told the jury that Madsen talked about electrocuting himself, hanging himself or throwing himself head first onto the cell floor.

Harmes said Madsen seemed very depressed and said he would have to kill himself and asked the best way to do it.

The officer said Madsen went into a toilet and asked Harmes to lift him up so he could remove the light bulb and electrocute himself by putting his fingers in the socket.

Harmes said he pointed out to Madsen that he (Harmes) also would receive the electrical charge if he were holding Madsen up to the light socket.

Harmes said Madsen's next idea was to climb about 2½ metres up the bars of his cell, and to ask the officer if he thought he would die if he jumped on his head.

"I said, 'no,' but told him he would get a helluva of a headache," Harmes testified.

The officer said Madsen seemed "almost desperate to kill himself," and next took off his shirt, twisted it, placed it over his neck and tied it to the bars of his cell.

"He asked me to tie his hands so he would not grab the bars at the last moment," Harmes said. "I said 'no' because I didn't think he was serious about killing himself."

"He looked very pathetic at the time. I told him to tell someone what he had done and he would feel a lot better.

"He said he did not think he could ever tell anyone else what he had done."

The officer said Madsen was taken out of the cells and on his return said he had confessed to the shootings.

In a later conversation, Harmes continued, Madsen told him he had planned to kidnap the teen-agers, but decided to kill them when he realized there were four present, not two.

Harmes said he asked Madsen how he felt during the shooting and the suspect said he felt awful.

He said he asked Madsen about Leola Guliker, 16, whose body has not been

College Prepares New Look

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Camosun College is ready to give a $6.5 million facelift to its Lansdowne campus, chairman Janet Baird said today.

If the education ministry approves funding, the money will be used to add 100,000 square feet of space to the cramped campus, Baird said.

The project is part of a major plan to turn Lansdowne into a core campus and the administrative centre of the college, she said.

Chances of getting the entire amount from the ministry are good and the college hopes to start construction in January, Baird said.

She said the council has approval in principle from Education Minister Pat McGeer who indicated they should go ahead with plans for the development.

The college council decided at a meeting Tuesday night to ask the ministry for money to hire a project manager and an architect.

The ministry cost estimate is $65 a square foot, but the college beleives the work can be done for less with careful planning, Baird said.

The college hopes Greater Victoria school board will agree to sell or lease its Paul Building and media centre complex.

If this isn't possible, the college will add 40,000 square feet to its ministry request, Baird said.

A long-range proposal for the college's development calls for three major campuses with satellite operations providing services to Sooke, Sidney and other outlying areas.

But completion of the entire plan is a long way off, Baird said.

Right now the college is concentrating on developing Lansdowne, which will house most of the academic transfer and career technical programs.

Renovations and protective work totalling $500,000 has already started and should be completed by August. This work must be done by order of the fire marshal's office if the campus is to open in the fall.

The provincial goverment recently bought Lansdowne from the University of Victoria for $4.5 million, thereby clearing the way for improvements.

For several years prior to the purchase, the college couldn't make any renovations because it didn't have title to the property.

As a result, the campus suffers from a long list of ailments including insufficient storage, classroom and office space and obsolete facilities.

College enrolment has grown rapidly since 1971 and by 1976 had already exceeded projected enrolments for 1978, according to facilties and planning committee report submitted to the council meeting.

$140,000 GIVEN OUT BY ALDERMEN

How Do You Score Grants Game?

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

The taxpayer was the real winner or loser in the annual inter-municipal grants sweepstakes run Tuesday.

More than $140,000 was given away plus another $200,000 or so in tax write-offs.

And what did you get for it? Well, maybe a great deal, but then again, maybe not.

Give yourself 2 points for each organization you think is deserving of public funding. Give another 2 if you or your family might actually make use of the services offered by the group (Will you ever visit the art gallery, for instance?). Give 1 if you think the organization makes a minimal contribution to society but deserves the benefit of the doubt. And subtract 2 for any organization that should be self-supporting and doesn't deserve to dip into the public purse.

- Canadian Red Cross Society, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Capital Region Association for Mentally Handicapped, partial taxes (requested taxes.)
- Two group homes for Cerebral Palsy Association of Lower Vancouver Island, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Four Seasons Musical Theatre Society, $2,500 (requested $5,000.)
- G.R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Garth Homer Achievement Centre, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Girl Guides of Canada, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Inter-Cultural Association of Greater Victoria, $1,000 (requested $10,808.)
- Kaleidoscope, $5,000 (requested $11,500)
- Maritime Museum of B.C., $15,000 (requested $15,000)
- Need - Victoria's Crisis Line, $11,500 (requested $12,000).
- St. John Ambulance, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Salvation Army, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Greater Victoria Christmas Bureau, $3,300 (requested $3,300)
- Vancouver Island Opera Society, $1,500 (requested $3,000)
- Victoria Concert Band, $500 (requested $1,000)
- Victoria Conservatory of Music, $12,000 (requested $15,935.)
- Victoria International Festival, $10,000 (requested $15,000)
- Victoria YM-YWCA, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Victoria Celebrations Society, $12,000 (requested $12,000.)
- Victory Van Association, $1,500 (requested $1,500.)
- Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, taxes (requested taxes.)

Organizations whose requests were denied are the following:

- Canadian Parapiegic Assoc.-B.C. Division, Amity Singers Society, Animal Control Survey for Capital Region, Community Action Group, Emily Carr Arts Centre, Fernwood House Society, Greater Victoria Nursery School Society, Open Space Arts Society, Rhythmics Victoria, The Summer Smile Show, Vancouver Island Region Swimming, Victoria College of Art, Victoria Community Video Service, Victoria Rape Relief Centre, National Youth Orchestra, and Capital Region Branch of B.C. Counsel for the Family.

Organizations whose requests for grants were approved are the following:

- Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, $40,000 (requested $75,000).
- Bastion Theatre Studio Society, $17,500 (requested $49,728.)
- Belfry Cultural Centre, $3,150 (requested $7,150.)
- Boy Scouts of Canada-Greater Victoria region, $1,500 (requested relief from taxes in lieu of grant.)
- Boys and Girls Club of Greater Victoria, taxes (requested taxes.)
- Canadian Mental Health Association-Island White Cross Rehabilitation Centre, taxes (requested taxes.)

If you scored 145 to 116 you're getting excellent value for your tax dollar. Immediately write your council saying you like the way your money's being given away.

If you got 116 to 75 you're still getting a good deal. You may not want to actually write council, but at least you can rest easy knowing your money is not being squandered — at least not on grants.

A score of 75 to 45 is still darn good. You didn't agree with some of those grants, but more than half of them rated three points or better.

At 45 to 29, however, you've got to wonder a little about where your tax money is going. Of course it's hard to decide what organizations are really deserving of public support — all in all you've got to admit the inter-municipal committee and your council representatives tried hard and did a fair job of it.

If you scored 29 to 15 you're not so happy about the way your money is being given away. But you still handed out a few points, so generally speaking you're the type of person who feels taxpayers must shoulder the burdens of society — cheer up, at least the grants committee agrees with you.

At 15 to 0 you've got reason for concern. Write council immediately, listing the organizations that scored negative points, indicating you think some money has been thrown away. (Remember, such an action will cost you at least 14 cents in postage these days — can you really afford to waste any more money?)

If you scored 0 to -30 you should definitely consider running for office next municipal election to try and straighten things out. Good luck.

Anyone scoring —30 to —58 is either extremely bad at math or is just plain mean and stingy. You can write coucil if you want, but please don't write this newspaper!

Budget: Realtors Differ On First-Home Proposal

The provincial government's proposal to introduce a new first-home purchase plan has met with a mixed reaction from Victoria real estate agents.

Bev Highton, president of the Greater Victoria Real Estate Board, said today the move will increase the availability of housing.

"I think it will open up a number of homes for people," he said.

The plan, announced by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe in his budget speech in the legislature Monday, calls for an increase in the grant for the purchase of a home to $2,500 from $1,000.

But Bruce Copp, manager of Block Bros. in Victoria, said today he doesn't think the boost in the grant will increase the number of homes purchased.

He said the amount of increase is not significant enough to alter people's decision as to whether to buy or not.

Details of the expanded program will not be available until the pertinent legislation is introduced in the legislature.

However, it appears the grant will be more restrictive in that it will apply only to families with children but more expansive as it will be available for the purchase of new as well as used homes.

The existing grant is available for anyone purchasing a new home.

A housing ministry spokesman was quoted Tuesday as saying the new grant will apply to used homes as well but a ministry spokesman today would not comment on the statement.

Highton said although a $2,500 grant will only reduce a mortgage by about $25 a month, the extra money will encourage people to invest in property they wouldn't have purchased before.

But Copp differed saying in terms of the financing that is available the amount is not significant.

He also said if the grant is only going to be available to families with children fewer people will take advantage.

Bawlf Backs Civic Centre

The $5 million multi-purpose civic centre proposal for downtown Victoria will be fully supported by the provincial government, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said Tuesday.

"All they have to do is ask," said the Victoria MLA in response to statements Monday by municipal politicians that the only hurdle to the project is the government which has not yet okayed a site.

Victoria and the Capital Regional District are proposing a joint project to construct a civic centre adjacent to the Crystal Gardens on Crown land.

Financing has been arranged and if the local governments get the land from the province, construction could start within a year.

The multi-purpose facility would operate year-round and could be as important to B.C. as Stratford is to Ontario, CRD grants committee chairman Shirley Dowell said.

Bawlf said he hasn't received a request for land for the project which would accommodate conventions and performing and visual arts.

"But I'd be delighted to consider a a proposal if they have one in mind."

So, What's Wrong With Volunteering?

max low

Volunteer.

For some strange reason the word carries a stigma.

Though truly it is better to give than to receive, society tends to regard a little weird the person who will work hours to help others; yet eagerly accepts those of us who work to help ourselves and pocket the financial rewards.

We're a strange lot, we humans. It's got so that even those on the receiving end often have the feeling there's something wrong with volunteer help.

But all that is changing — slowly, say a couple of women close to the volunteer work scene in Oak Bay.

I chatted the other day with Pat Andrews, co-ordinator of Oak Bay Volunteer Services, and Linda Campbell, chairman of the parent body, the Oak Bay Community Association.

"A lot of people who could do with a little help or maybe only just a little company, shy away from us because they feel they're asking for charity," Linda, a busy mother of three, explained. "They say 'We can pay, we can pay' but money doesn't come into it. Really it's just a good neighbor thing."

In fact, the people who run what is one of only two such volunteer services around here (the other is in James Bay) wish there was no need for it.

"Sure, we'd prefer there was no need for such a service," said Linda. "We'd prefer it if people just helped each other without it. But reality is such that the need is there. It has been shown."

LINDA

PAT

A survey in 1976 revealed a host of problems in Oak Bay that were perhaps a little more subtle and less obvious than in other areas, Linda pointed out.

And so, in January 1977, with the aid of an LIP grant, the Oak Bay Volunteer Services was born. It struggled along for a few months as a purely volunteer organization but found it necessary to hire Pat Andrews (she works for three hours a day officially) as co-ordinator.

Today, a little more than a year after it started, the service has 85 volunteers (one-third of them from outside of Oak Bay) who help 100 clients.

Pat and Linda would like to see a lot more people in both categories. And so, when Volunteer Recognition Week is marked officially throughout B.C. April 24 through 29, there will be booths manned at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre and elsewhere to explain how things work to possible future volunteers and clients.

"We want people to drop in and see what we do," said Pat. "We want them to know it's not like a spider's web — you won't get caught!"

Well okay, but what kind of things does a volunteer do?

In Oak Bay, just about anything from helping around the house to shopping and just sitting with someone. But drivers and gardeners are most in demand.

"We keep the drivers for doctors' and dentists' appointments and haven't been able to get into the recreation side of driving yet, though we'd like to," explained Pat.

Often, of course, it's just sheer loneliness that makes a person pick up the phone and call the Volunteer Services.

"We get called now for many little things, though people will never phone and say they're lonely," Linda said.

"To me, changing a lightbulb sums it all up," Pat said warmly. "It's a little thing but there are more accidents with senior citizens doing that than anything else in the home. It takes a volunteer two minutes and they'll probably enjoy staying for a cup of tea and a chat."

"What our service is trying to do is help make the society a little more like what we want it to be," Linda pointed out. "We'd like the elderly to help the young, with advice and babysitting and so on, and the young and not-so-young to help the elderly."

"The ultimate is to help senior citizens stay in their own homes as long as they can," said Pat. "If we can do that by any little help we can give them, then that's better than any nursing home they may be pushed into."

Tennis Lures Off-beat Gizmo Makers

By ART HARRIS
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — You can breathe new life into old, tired tennis balls, keep sweaty palms from slipping up mid-backhand, soothe tennis elbow and stretch an extra set from patchwork sneakers the big toe is peeking through. Such are the claims made by the season's latest tennis gizmos.

No one says gadgets are any substitute for dependable equipment (and lots of practice), but gadgets can provide a few laughs while you tweak the strings back into shape.

A quick survey of the latest wizardry on pro-shop shelves revealed the gadget industry's dedication to rejuvenating squishy tennis balls. At $40, something called "Tenni-Pump" was definitely the Gucci of ball-restorers. Only thing is you'd have to pump up a lot of balls to break even.

It seems a bizarre little machine, with a pressure gauge on the side and a cone-shaped opening for the ball. Plop, the ball goes into the catbird seat, where it is catherized, shot full of air (keep your eye on the gauge), sealed with goo at the proper pressure and, voila, an (almost) brand-new ball. Kind of like fixing a flat tire. No one would vouch for the restored ball's longevity, but, it was lightly suggested, had Ponce de Leon been a player, his tennis balls would have applauded technology's answer to the fountain of youth. Of course, he would have simply purchased a new can.

Another ball-saver on the shelf was slashed from $6.95 to 25 cents at one tennis shop.

Behind every bargain, of course, there is a reason, and the reason for this bargain, laughed Washington salesman Dave Flannagan, was that "it was a complete failure. When you injected a ball with the chemical, it expanded but the hole didn't close. So the stuff dribbled out. We had something else called 'The Shot' but we had to send that back to the factory, too."

There are a number of goodies on the market that promise to prevent tennis balls from running out of air in the first place. "Tennis Ball Saver" ($9.95), a pressurized, screw-top plastic container, promises balls a home away from home by maintaining the pressure of the original can. "Nu-Ball" ($7.95), a pump with pressure gauge, fits atop the original can and does the same thing.

Re-Fuzzer ($3) does just what it says it does: It refuzzes fuzzless balls. Just rub one around in the prickly mitt of this gizmo — it looks like a mini-juicer with plastic thorns — and fuzz on the ball stands up as proud as Orphan Annie's curls.

For tennis buffs with no pockets, there is a ball clip ("The Third Hand," $1) which fastens onto shorts and holds one, count it, one ball. For players who ride bikes there is a nifty clip-on device that fastens racquets to bicycles. So, if you don't get a court, take a pedal.

"Shoe-Goo" ($3), a liquid rubber cement that dries overnight, can plug the toe-hole in our tennis shoe. But "Nu-Toe" ($2), a rubber bumper that fits right over the tip of the sneaker, means a brand-new toe.

You can stop your gut from slipping and fraying with "String-a-Lings," tiny plastic clothespin-like devices that keep the strings apart ($3).

As for sorry grips, well, "Grip Tape" may be the answer. The latex tape, available in green, red, blue or brown, wraps around a leather grip. Just the thing to keep sweaty palms in place, it was agreed.

There was some dispute, though, over exactly how balls do lose their bounce.

Flannagan, formerly of the Frostberg State College varsity tennis team, has experienced such dilemma firsthand. He suggested that balls begin to die the moment they leave the home. "If you open a brand-new can of balls and don't touch them, they'll get flat just sitting out," he said.

Serious players, no doubt, will scoff at such manufactured magic. But who dares argue with the resurrection of a dead ball that's lost its bounce? Indeed, proof of a miracle.

DuPont Protests Monopoly Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States federal government has charged that E.I. duPont de Nemours Co., one of the largest corporations in the U.S., illegally tried to monopolize production of a pigment used to whiten paint, plastic and other products.

Irving S. Shapiro, chairman of the Wilmington, Del., company, said: "The complaint is wholly without basis. There are six manufacturers of titanium dioxide and duPont has become the leading producer in this industry as the result of proprietary technology developed by the company in the 1950s."

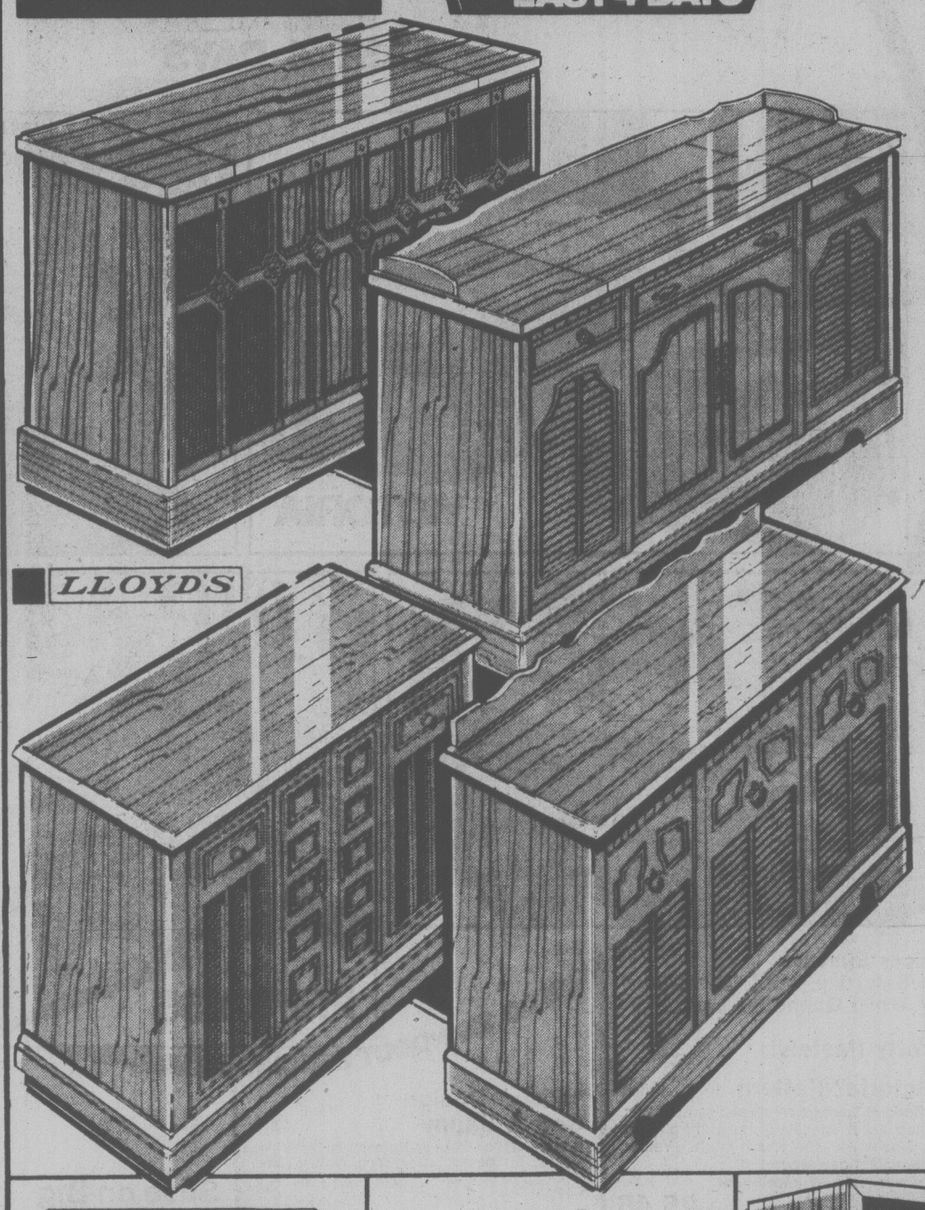

He said the company will contest the allegations.
